A Word from SASE President Gary Herrigel

SASE is delighted and honored to be able to host its Annual Meeting in Kyoto this year. Asia has long been a focus of attention for many members of the Association and increasing numbers of our members come from many fine Universities in the region. Moreover, it is an auspicious historical moment in the global political economy due in no small part to the way in which the spectacular rise of the larger Asia region has transformed trade and power relations around the world. By having our annual meeting in Asia for the first time, SASE is both acknowledging and expressing these shifts in emphasis and attention. We are increasingly a global organization not only in word, but also in deed. May the future continue to cultivate the open cosmopolitan spirit within our organization that the current inaugural meeting in Asia represents.

The SASE leadership would like to thank the many people who have made this first meeting in Asia possible. Our hosts at Doshisha University have been incredibly efficient and gracious in extending themselves and their venue for the conference. We thank in particular Masayo Fujimoto, Sayaka Sakoda, Madoka Watanabe, and Tadashi Yagi for an inordinate amount of hard work and very good will in making things happen. We are also grateful to the Kyoto Convention Bureau, ANA Airlines, and the Fondation France-Japon de L'EHESS, as well as to Doshisha University itself, for underwriting support. Finally, thanks need to be extended to the SASE staff, Martha Zuber, Pat Zraidi, and Jacob Bromberg, for staying on top of the infinite number of details and unbounded tasks associated with an international meeting of this scale and scope. Bravo to all!

The President would like to thank the members of the Program Committee, Mary Gallagher and Tobias Schulze-Cleven, for their broad knowledge and hard work identifying great speakers and panels for the conference. But most importantly, we all need to thank the Program Director, Sébastien Lechevalier, whose extensive knowledge of the academic and cultural landscape in Japan helped in uncountable ways to make this event in Kyoto possible.

May you all have a wonderful and productive event in Kyoto!

About This Program

This conference schedule has been loosely divided into two event types: speakers and sessions. In an attempt to limit scheduling conflicts, sessions do not overlap with featured speakers.

Plenary and semi-plenary featured speakers are all listed in the at-a-glance calendar.

There are ten time slots for sessions over the course of the conference, as indicated on the at-a-glance calendar. Since there are multiple sessions scheduled into each time slot, each session has been identified with a letter and a number. The letter corresponds to the network organizing the session and is paired with a number to create a unique identifier to help you locate the session in the program. Featured Panels are listed as FP, Mini-Conference Themes as TH, and Special Events as SP.

To find out where and when a given participant is presenting, you can look at the participant list at the back of this program. Next to his or her name, you will find the panels in which he or she is presenting (e.g., Jane Doe, A-8). Once you have this information, you can look for the A-8 panel in the main schedule in order to find the session time and location.

Alternatively, you can visit <https://sase.confex.com/sase/2018/meetingapp.cgi/Home> or download the SASE 2018 mobile app through Google Play or the Apple Store.

The main schedule provides a detailed list of sessions (titles, locations, participants, etc.) in chronological order. To help you navigate it more quickly, a list of sessions organized by network appears just before it in this program.

The PDF version of this program is available on the SASE website www.sase.org

*Please note: You must bring your own laptop if you plan on using a PowerPoint presentation (Macintosh users should also bring a standard VGA convertor).

SASE 2018 Annual Conference Theme

Global Reordering: Prospects for Equality, Democracy and Justice Doshisha University – Kyoto, Japan

For decades, scholars have been charting the multiple effects of “globalization” on political, economic and social practices in the developed and developing world. Broadly, globalization has been understood to involve open trade and the growth of transnational flows, linkages and interdependencies at all levels involving knowledge, labor, business, finance, technology, regulation and norms, such as human rights. After World War II, multiple regimes and institutions traversing and interlinking domestic and transnational positions emerged and were then continuously modified to foster and govern the globalization process. For decades, the diffusion of the ideology and practice architectures of “globalization” was made possible by a strong developed capitalist alliance of mostly western powers, headed by the United States. The results of this historical project have been highly uneven: some regions of the global south (especially Asia), experienced tremendous growth and living standard improvement, while others (eg in Africa) languished; the metropolitan north experienced an initial multiple decade period of prosperity followed by ever more obvious stagnation and socio-economic distress. After more than a half century of increasing openness, nearly all regions in the north and south are experiencing alarming and seemingly ever worsening inequality and often painfully disruptive adjustment in work, civic and private lives. In the wake of these developments, the forces unleashed by the globalization project now seem to be pushing toward its recalibration. Economic success in Asia, especially in China, has shifted global power relations and alliances, challenging the premier position of the US. Recently, populist and authoritarian movements in many global regions have channeled reactions to globalization’s disruptive qualities into political challenges to the basic practices and governance architectures undergirding globalization both domestically and transnationally. Today, at nearly every level of social life across the globe, social, economic and political relations, practices and modes of organization and governance have been unsettled and destabilized.

How should we make sense of the current moment? Exhaustion, rage, reaction, reform, transformation and experimentation all seem to be present and intermingling in turbulent and unpredictable ways. The 2018 annual SASE conference in Kyoto will serve as an occasion for existing SASE networks, as well as new groupings in the form of mini-conferences, to explore the ways in which the processes of reordering occurring across the globe are impacting traditional research areas and paradigms of analysis. How are new developments redrawing the practice and governance terrain within firms and corporations, in management practices, in the welfare state, the law, in industrial relations, across supply chains and in regulation? Are processes of innovation and technological change substantively affected by (or even driving) the current process of global reordering? SASE as a community has long embraced values furthering equality, justice and democracy across a broad array of research terrains. How do reordering processes impact those commitments? The Association’s first meeting in Asia, itself an expression of the changing composition of the global academic conversation, seems like a very fitting occasion for reflection on these powerful dynamics of change and recomposition.

THE NEW SCHOOL

Fathomless Futures: Algorithmic and Imagined

The New School – New York City, USA

27-29 June 2019

Call for papers

We all live our lives forward, facing uncertain futures, yet social scientists feel most comfortable explaining the social world through causes rooted in the past or through the constraints and resources lodged in the present. Such explanations omit an important step: both historic and structural forces are refracted through the set of expectations people have about futures they imagine. Those forces are activated by the anticipation of what lies ahead.

We live in a time of rapidly growing predictive technologies, and spectacular prediction failures. Powerful algorithms are predicting and guiding our actions from economic forecasts, stock trading models, consumer research, hiring decisions, welfare administration, risk management, electoral mobilization, and political choices to the most mundane tasks of everyday life, like borrowing money, choosing books and movies, typing messages, filtering spam, and driving cars. Artificial intelligence, machine learning, and big data are refashioning work, markets, governmentality, sociability, identity, and morality in unexpected ways and are redrawing the boundaries of what counts as valuable skills, knowledge, and culture. Their societal effects vary: they democratize access to information, but threaten privacy, help us with everyday chores, yet turn our personal data into a tradeable commodity. Improved efficiencies of prediction may bring great benefits in areas like healthcare and public safety, while trapping many in vicious cycles of accumulating disadvantages.

Just as predictive technologies proliferate, the world is becoming increasingly unpredictable. Our age is one of economic and political volatility that has presented ordinary people and experts alike with a series of great surprises, a heightened sense of uncertainty, and anxiety. With globalization both charging forward and in retreat, democracies in crisis, inequalities growing, institutions fraying, and large populations fleeing poverty and violence, exacerbated by our increasingly unstable natural environment, the future seems exceptionally inscrutable.

As no significant utopian political or economic alternatives are on offer, history appears to resemble a driverless car that is oblivious to our intended destination. The absence of a desirable and credible future in the public imagination makes inequality and injustice even harder to accept, fostering desperate resistance, resignation, or false nostalgia for golden pasts that never existed.

While this conference will feature papers all across topics of traditional concern for socio-economics, we especially welcome submissions addressing these changes in politics, the economy, and society at large. How can we understand the direction in which we are headed? What are the various ways to regulate these processes? How are these changes influencing inequalities, democracy, labor, communities, and the international balance of power? How should we think of time in social life? What role does imagination play in the economy? Will the mechanization of human cognition lead to a mindless social universe? How are identities being reconfigured? What has happened to human expectations, hopes, and predictions? How can we (re)gain control over our collective futures?

Established in 1989, SASE owes its remarkable success to the determination to provide a platform for creative research addressing important social problems. Throughout its three decades, SASE has encouraged and hosted rigorous work of any methodological or theoretical bent from around the world based on the principle that innovative research emerges from paying attention to wider context and connecting knowledge developed in different fields. This conference will also be an occasion to celebrate SASE's 30th anniversary.

SASE 2019 Mini-Conference Themes

Call for Proposals

Fathomless Futures: Algorithmic and Imagined

Mini-Conference Theme Proposal Deadline: 1 October 2018

As they have in the past years, thematic mini-conferences will form a key element of next year's annual conference in New York City, hosted by The New School from 27-29 June 2019. Proposals are now welcome for mini-conference themes. Several mini-conference themes will be selected for inclusion in the Call for Papers by the program committee, which may also propose themes of its own. Preference will be given to proposals linked to the overarching conference theme, "Fathomless Futures: Algorithmic and Imagined," but mini-conferences on other SASE-related themes will also be considered.

Proposals for mini-conference themes must be submitted electronically to the SASE Executive Director by 1 October 2018. All mini-conference proposals should include the name(s) and email addresses of the organizer(s), together with a brief description. As in previous years, each mini-conference will consist of 3 to 6 panels, which will be featured as a separate stream in the program. Each panel will have a discussant, meaning that selected participants must submit a completed paper in advance, by 27 May 2019. Submissions for panels will be open to all scholars on the basis of an extended abstract. If a paper proposal cannot be accommodated within a mini-conference, organizers will forward it to the most appropriate research network as a regular submission.

Consult the program for the SASE 2019 theme. Please see www.sase.org to see mini-conference themes from previous years.

Proposals should be submitted to: Martha Zuber (saseexecutive@sase.org)

Special Events

Meet the Editors: Socio-Economic Review A Discussion of Publication Strategies, Topics, and New Developments with the Editors

The editors of Socio-Economic Review will speak on getting published in the journal in room RY403 of the Ryoshinkan building from 9:00am-10:30am on Sunday, June 24th.

Women's Forum

SASE is pleased to launch its inaugural Women's Forum (organized by Sarah Ashwin, Chiara Benassi, Virginia L Doellgast, Jacqueline O'Reilly, Caroline Ruiner, and Dorottya Sallai [chair]), which aims to improve senior representation of women in academia, to stimulate discussions about important issues, including but not limited to 'challenges of publishing', 'work-life balance', 'leadership roles' or 'career progression', as well as to facilitate networking among female scholars within SASE. The event will provide an opportunity for female SASE colleagues to share their ideas, grow their professional network, and liaise with other women within their field or more generally in academia.

This event will begin with a peer-to-peer session, organized as moderated workshops along various themes during the 10:45am-12:15pm session on Sunday, June 24th. The Women's Forum will meet on the 5th floor of the Neiseikan building, and will be followed by a self-funded lunch. Participants will work in small groups and will have the opportunity to confidentially discuss issues, raise problems, explore areas of interest about their work and career in academia and receive advice, information about best practice, and recommendations from each other. Afterwards, there will be an informal follow-up lunch for networking and gathering ideas for the following year's meeting. The event is open to female SASE participants and those who identify as women. Box lunches will be available on a first come, first served basis.

Tea Ceremony

Students from Doshisha University will very kindly be hosting a tea ceremony for SASE participants on Saturday, June 23rd from 2pm-4pm in the first floor lounge of the Ryoshinkan building. Green tea and Japanese sweets will be served to 100 participants on a first come, first served basis.

Impact of Shareholder-Value Pursuit on Labor Policies at Japanese Joint-Stock Companies: Case of Nikkei Index 400

Session TH08-04

Abstract: This paper aims at finding out how the shareholder-value pursuit has affected labor policies at selected Japanese listed enterprises. It concentrates on the issue of labor bifurcation, whereby the proportion of nonregular employees has grown rapidly over the last two decades, currently approaching the numbers of regular workers.

In Japan, corporate governance reforms became key to structural macroeconomic changes, according to the 2013 “Japan Revitalization Strategy” formulated by the Cabinet Office. This document mandated the creation of the JPX-Nikkei Index 400 – an index called to accommodate the most investor-friendly joint-stock companies. The shift towards a shareholder model has been further reinforced through a rapid surge in foreign stockholding that has started during the post-bubble period of the mid-1990s. At the same time, the externalities of increased returns to stockholders have been the changes in the related domains of management and labor, which I explain through application of the political economic theory. This theory underlines the importance of inclusion into a “political block” for being eligible for economic benefits. Consequently, I argue that the increased returns to politically privileged shareholders have been achieved at the expense of a growing proportion of unprivileged nonregular employees.

The evidence yields support to the argument about the positive correlation between the shareholder value and the proportion of nonregulars. On the other hand, foreign stockholding does not appear to be significantly correlated with the increase in nonregular employment. In turn, the study has found that the increase in foreign stockholding is likely to be associated with higher corporate revenue, but not with higher productivity. These results suggest that neoliberal reforms within the Japanese “nonliberal” context can boost corporate performance in the short run. However, this comes at the cost of exacerbated organizational inequalities.

2018 Socio-Economic Review Best Paper Prize

Achim Kemmerling

Honorable Mention: Jessica Epstein

The SER Best Paper Prize committee (Sigrid Quack, Bruno Palier, and Marc Schneiberg [chair]) considered all the reviewed papers for the four 2017 issues, including symposia papers, but not state of the art, discussion or review forum papers. The committee looked for papers that: 1) addressed substantive questions and issues that have far reaching implications and are of interest to a broad range of SER readers; 2) clearly and effectively engaged prior theory and research; and 3) used state of the art research methods to analyze new or existing data sets in ways that either brought important new phenomena to light or substantially revised existing understanding of socio-economic facts, trends or relationships.

The committee is delighted to announce the winning paper for the 10th annual prize for the best submitted article published in the previous year: Achim Kemmerling's "Left without Choice? Economic Ideas, Frame and the Party Politics of Value Added Taxation" (SER vol. 15, No. 4, p. 777-796).

This paper addresses the rise of VAT as an international phenomenon, an important issue at the intersection of fiscal and welfare state studies, by analyzing the salience, consistency, and resonance of different frames in two well-chosen contrasting cases, Germany and the UK. Combining qualitative and quantitative analyses of parliamentary plenary debates, the paper finds that speakers mobilize three basic frames – regressivity, necessity, and efficiency – to frame the case for or against VAT. Frames emphasizing macro-economic issues and redistribution remained salient in debates over VAT in the UK, but there was a clear and consistent shift toward micro-economic frames that emphasized labor market incentives and efficiency in debates within Germany. Moreover, frame resonance in both cases rested on structural conditions and speakers' standing in some counter-intuitive ways. Unemployment increased the resonance of regressivity frames, but also concerns with micro-economic efficiency, while decreasing concerns with macro-economic issues of demand and inflation. Left party members were more likely to invoke not just regressivity frames, but also micro-economic frames emphasizing labor market incentives and efficiency. Overall, "Left without choice?" deeply engages the existing literature theoretically and produces empirical analyses of resonance that creatively add to the state of the art in framing and idea studies.

The committee would also make an honorable mention of Jessica Epstein's article, "Constructing the Rational Actor: Ideological Labor and Science Politics in the Global Food System" (SER vol. 15, No. 2, p. 263-281). This paper examines the recent rise of scientific governance of global affairs. In contrast to prevailing theories of scientization as a modern secular religion, this paper pursues a conflict-driven approach that reveals complex processes through which certain kinds of science-based regulation becomes enshrined in global governance for instrumental political purposes. Focusing on the epistemic contest between the European precautionary and the US American proportional risk assessment approaches in global food and safety regulation, the combined analysis of policy documents and expert-interviews traces how US actors pursue a self-consciously hegemonic project to institutionalize their preferred model of science-based regulation at a global scale. The important theoretical contribution of the paper is to reveal the underlying and often invisible processes of establishing boundaries between apparently scientific and unscientific approaches, the ideological framing of risk and uncertainty in global politics, and the three frames through which US actors sought to purify their agenda as a scientific approach: a technical progress frame, a share our science frame and a leadership and protection frame.

SASE 2018 Elections

We are delighted to announce that Akos Rona-Tas (University of California, San Diego) will serve as SASE President in 2018-2019 and Nina Bandelj (University of California, Irvine) will serve her first term as SASE Treasurer from 2018-2020

Introducing Theory & Struggle

Theory & Struggle (formerly 'Praxis'), will be published by Liverpool University Press from 2017.

Theory & Struggle is the journal of the Marx Memorial Library, an independent charity dedicated, since its establishment in 1933, to the advancement of education and learning in all aspects of Marxism, labour and working class history.

Currently published annually, it features articles that grapple with debates taking place within Marxist circles as well studying critical developments in the labour and progressive movements in Britain and internationally, including movements for gender equality, for racial equality and for peace.

Historical Studies in Industrial Relations

Historical Studies in Industrial Relations was established in 1996 by the Centre for Industrial Relations, Keele University, to provide an outlet for, and to stimulate an interest in, historical work in the field of industrial relations and the history of industrial relations thought.

HSIR is published annually.

Standard subscription includes online access to archive from 1996.

Labour History Review

Since 1960 Labour History Review has explored the working lives and politics of 'ordinary' people. It has played a key role in redefining social and political history.

Editors:

Paul Corthorn, Queen's University Belfast
Peter J Gurney, University of Essex

SOCIO-ECONOMIC REVIEW

Devoted to the advancement of socio-economics, Socio-Economic Review deals with the analytical, political, and moral questions arising at the intersection between economy and society.

Articles in Socio-Economic Review explore how the economy is or should be governed by social relations, institutional rules, political decisions, and cultural values. They also consider how the economy in turn affects the society of which it is part, for example by breaking up old institutional forms and giving rise to new ones.
