A Word from SASE President Christine Musselin

Welcome to SASE 2017 in Lyon, for the 29th annual conference of SASE. It is a great pleasure to hold this conference in France and to have the chance to be hosted by the Université Claude Bernard. I would like to give my sincere thanks to the President of the Université Claude Bernard and his staff for making this international event possible. I am very glad to see that so many of you sent proposals to discuss, exchange, and explore the theme of this year’s conference: “What’s Next? Disruptive/Collaborative Economy or Business as Usual?” within 14 Mini-Conferences, four plenary sessions, and 15 Networks.

Lyon is the place to be for our conference because there is a long tradition of collaborative economy in this city, starting with the silk industry in the 19th century. About 8,000 foremen and 40,000 workers – called the Canuts – worked in the Croix-Rousse neighborhood of Lyon. They were the first to create a blue-collar newspaper “L’écho de la fabrique” (The Workshop’s Echo) and also developed mutual assistance funds (caisses de secours mutuel). Because they cooperated with one another instead of behaving like competitors, they were able to collectively make technological progress, inventing the Jacquard looms, to give just one example. Not surprisingly, during the famous Canut revolt, foremen and workers showed themselves to be willing to join and fight together against the silk traders, who were trying to lower the price of silk.

Lyon is also the place where the Lumière brothers invented film! Their home and museum – a short walk from the university – should not be missed. And you must come back in December to celebrate the festival of lights.

Of course, there are not the only reasons why we are here. Before or after the conference, I hope that you will have a chance to discover that Lyon lies between two rivers and is full of terraced cafés, bicycle paths, and walkways along its banks. The city has undergone a facelift over the last 15 years, and the result is amazing. The local government, with its very dynamic mayor, has refurbished buildings in the historic center, introduced high-tech transportation systems, and attracted a great deal of industry. Today, Lyon is a leader in the pharmaceutical sector, and its large academic community with its first rate universities is a big plus for the city – with 137,000 students, Lyon the second largest university hub in France.

Yet it’s also the food scene that has taken center stage today. Lyon is the gastronomic capital of France and the culinary scene is booming. The hero of this part of Lyon’s story is the three star chef Paul Bocuse. Over the last decade, Bocuse and other prolific chefs have opened lively, high profile restaurants in the city, which has helped to start a real buzz around Lyon. One of the most enticing gastronomic attractions is a huge glass-covered food market in the heart of Lyon.
Lyon: Les Halles de Lyon – Paul Bocuse is pandemonium of scents and flavors that can seem more like a food museum than a market at times. Indeed, one wants to taste and buy everything on offer (and often the merchants do offer tastings!) from some one hundred stands selling oysters, sausages, carefully selected cheeses and wines, and more. I do hope you will have a chance to discover and enjoy all of these wonderful places in the city of Lyon.

But let us not forget that many people also worked very hard in order to make this conference be a great experience. Organizing such an event is a huge amount of work, and I was very impressed by the incredible dedication of David Vallat and those working with him on the local organizing committee: Jérôme Blanc and Ludovic Frobert, as well as Nadège Botia and Solange Perrel, who have been crucial and indeed worked miracles. I thank all of you for your efficiency, the ideas and support you brought to the project, and your ability to interest so many sponsors in our conference. I very much appreciate the great support given to us by the institutions of higher education of the Rhone Alpes Region, which have made this event possible: Université Claude Bernard, of course, but also the University of Lyon 1, the University of Lyon 2, Sciences Po Lyon, ENS de Lyon, the Laboratoire Triangle research lab, and the University of Grenoble-Alpes. I would also like to warmly thank the Region Auvergne Rhône-Alpes, the Mérieux Fondation, the Institut de la Caisse des Dépôts, the Métropole of Lyon, and the city of Lyon, which will be welcoming us in its City Hall. We would not be able to hold this conference without them.

This conference’s organization is also the result of teamwork. It has been a pleasure to imagine the program, invite speakers, and organize challenging “authors meet critics” panels with the invaluable help of program committee members David Vallat and Michel Lallement.

But first, we all owe thanks to the dynamic Martha Zuber, my dear friend for so many years, for the incredible work she has achieved with her wonderful team of Jacob Bromberg, Pat Zraidi, and Shaun Owen. This year was especially dense for Martha and her team, because, on top of this conference, they launched a new SASE website and accompanied the renewal of the SASE newsletter that our beloved Treasurer Akos Rona-Tas steered with myriad ideas and boundless energy. As Vice President for Research of Sciences Po, I am proud that Sciences Po and the CSO, thanks to its director, Olivier Borraz, support the SASE Paris office. I also had the good fortune to benefit from the experience and help of past SASE Presidents Marion Fourcade and Glenn Morgan, as well as from the professionalism and availability of SASE Treasurer Akos Rona-Tas.

We all hope that you will have a great conference, discover Lyon and the region, and enjoy discussions, exchanges, and fruitful debates to the fullest during these three days.
About This Program

This conference schedule has been loosely divided into two event types: speakers and sessions. In an attempt to limit scheduling conflicts, sessions do not overlap with featured speakers.

Plenary and semi-plenary featured speakers are all listed in the at-a-glance calendar.

There are ten time slots for sessions over the course of the conference, as indicated on the at-a-glance calendar. Since there are multiple sessions scheduled into each time slot, each session has been identified with a letter and a number. The letter corresponds to the network organizing the session and is paired with a number to create a unique identifier to help you locate the session in the program. Featured Panels are listed as FP, Mini-Conference Themes as TH, and Special Events as SP.

To find out where and when a given participant is presenting, you can look at the participant list at the back of this program. Next to his or her name, you will find the panels in which he or she is presenting (e.g., Jane Doe, A-8). Once you have this information, you can look for the A-8 panel in the main schedule in order to find the session time and location.

Alternatively, you can visit https://sase.confex.com/sase/2017/meetingapp.cgi/Home or download the SASE 2017 mobile app through Google Play or the Apple Store.

The main schedule provides a detailed list of sessions (titles, locations, participants, etc.) in chronological order. To help you navigate it more quickly, a list of sessions organized by network appears just before it in this program.

The PDF version of this program is available on the SASE website www.sase.org

*Please note: You must bring either a USB key or your own laptop if you plan on using a PowerPoint presentation (Macintosh users should bring a standard VGA convertor). USB keys are preferable.

Hotels, taxis, plumbers, tool sellers or hires, and car renters are all facing the challenges presented by the ever-growing number of apps and social networks that organize exchanges between non-professionals and ephemeral users. Many claim this is a radical transformation for the traditional economy. Although digital technologies are crucial to the development of this new form of economy, there is greater innovation in the new behaviors it generates, in the alternative forms of valuation it requires, and in the new social practices it implies than in the technologies themselves.

But these new forms of exchange may take rather different if not opposed paths. Some develop as a kind of anti-market alternative: these are based on swap – with one partner providing time or skills to another who reciprocally provides another skill or service – or even on altruism – as when one welcomes visitors for the sake of meeting and exchanging with new people. Collaboration, solidarity, reciprocity, and sharing play a strong role and are strong drivers in the development of forms of counter-institutional exchange. These exchanges take place not only on the Internet, but also in places that are neither workplace nor domicile. Are these collaborative spaces/communities (fablabs, hackerspaces, makerspaces, coworking spaces, etc.) reinventing the way we produce, work, innovate and exchange?

Solidary-based exchanges are quite different from those relying on monetary exchange and create new markets that compete with the more traditional ones. They directly challenge the monopoly built by professionals, disputing the necessity of professional skills for the activities concerned and thus disputing the exclusive access and control wielded by certain professional groups. They also challenge employment relationships, state regulation, institutionalized work, and the very valuation of the activities in question. Indeed, we are seeing the extension of collaborative habits developed on the Internet (sharing data, information, and knowledge) to organizations. Competition, deregulation (or even disruption), and conflicts over competence are major features of this development, which some consider the return of the commons.

Both forms of economy nevertheless raise similar issues. They question the conditions allowing for the development of these new forms of exchange. Allowing others to use one's apartment or one's car (for free or for money), sharing common goods, or producing in common (with open-source material) not only implies a relationship of trust on the part of borrowers, shared users, or producers, but also a certain relationship to one's personal goods and to property more broadly.

The collaborative economy also has a policing function that should be explored in two ways: on the one hand, the continued vitality of exchange relies heavily on the reputation of partners, which is built upon the visibility of ratings obtained by both users and providers alike. Everyone assesses everyone else and thereby exercises control over the group. On the other hand, people are creating rules to organize and protect their common work from the “enclosures” of the market (creative commons licenses).

Call for papers

For decades, scholars have been charting the multiple effects of “globalization” on political, economic and social practices in the developed and developing world. Broadly, globalization has been understood to involve open trade and the growth of transnational flows, linkages and interdependencies at all levels involving knowledge, labor, business, finance, technology, regulation and norms, such as human rights. After World War II, multiple regimes and institutions traversing and interlinking domestic and transnational positions emerged and were then continuously modified to foster and govern the globalization process. For decades, the diffusion of the ideology and practice architectures of “globalization” was made possible by a strong developed capitalist alliance of mostly western powers, headed by the United States. The results of this historical project have been highly uneven: some regions of the global south (especially Asia), experienced tremendous growth and living standard improvement, while others (e.g., in Africa) languished; the metropolitan north experienced an initial multiple decade period of prosperity followed by ever more obvious stagnation and socio-economic distress. After more than a half century of increasing openness, nearly all regions in the north and south are experiencing alarming and seemingly ever worsening inequality and often painfully disruptive adjustment in work, civic and private lives. In the wake of these developments, the forces unleashed by the globalization project now seem to be pushing toward its recalibration. Economic success in Asia, especially in China, has shifted global power relations and alliances, challenging the premier position of the US. Recently, populist and authoritarian movements in many global regions have channeled reactions to globalization’s disruptive qualities into political challenges to the basic practices and governance architectures undergirding globalization both domestically and transnationally. Today, at nearly every level of social life across the globe, social, economic and political relations, practices and modes of organization and governance have been unsettled and destabilized.

How should we make sense of the current moment? Exhaustion, rage, reaction, reform, transformation and experimentation all seem to be present and intermingling in turbulent and unpredictable ways. The 2018 annual SASE conference in Kyoto will serve as an occasion for existing SASE networks, as well as new groupings in the form of mini-conferences, to explore the ways in which the processes of reordering occurring across the globe are impacting traditional research areas and paradigms of analysis. How are new developments redrawing the practice and governance terrain within firms and corporations, in management practices, in the welfare state, the law, in industrial relations, across supply chains and in regulation? Are processes of innovation and technological change substantively affected by (or even driving) the current process of global reordering? SASE as a community has long embraced values furthering equality, justice and democracy across a broad array of research terrains. How do reordering processes impact those commitments? The Association’s first meeting in Asia, itself an expression of the changing composition of the global academic conversation, seems like a very fitting occasion for reflection on these powerful dynamics of change and recomposition.

SASE 2018 Mini-Conference Themes
Call for Proposals

Global Reordering:
Prospects for Equality, Democracy and Justice

Mini-Conference Theme Proposal Deadline: 2 October 2017

As they have in the past years, thematic mini-conferences will form a key element of next year’s annual conference in Kyoto, Japan, hosted by the Doshisha University from 23-25 June 2018. Proposals are now welcome for mini-conference themes. Several mini-conference themes will be selected for inclusion in the Call for Papers by the program committee, which may also propose themes of its own. Preference will be given to proposals linked to the overarching conference theme, “Global Reordering: Prospects for Equality, Democracy and Justice,” but mini-conferences on other SASE-related themes will also be considered.

Proposals for mini-conference themes must be submitted electronically to the SASE Executive Director by 2 October 2017. All mini-conference proposals should include the name(s) and email addresses of the organizer(s), together with a brief description. As in previous years, each mini-conference will consist of 3 to 6 panels, which will be featured as a separate stream in the program. Each panel will have a discussant, meaning that selected participants must submit a completed paper in advance, by 28 May 2018. Submissions for panels will be open to all scholars on the basis of an extended abstract. If a paper proposal cannot be accommodated within a mini-conference, organizers will forward it to the most appropriate research network as a regular submission.

Consult the program for the SASE 2018 theme. Please see www.sase.org to look at mini-conference themes from previous years.

Proposals should be submitted to: Martha Zuber (saseexecutive@sase.org)
Special Events

Asian Scholars Brainstorming Coffee: Preparations for SASE/Kyoto 2018
SASE will be holding its first annual meeting in Asia on the occasion of its 30th anniversary. In hopes of expanding SASE’s reach while still ensuring strong participation from European and North American scholars, we cordially invite all those interested to join us in a brainstorming session from 8-9am on Saturday, July 1st in the Salle de Conseil of the Bâtiment Principal on the main campus. Coffee will be provided – we need your input!

Socio-Economic Review Roundtable
“Diversified Quality Production Re-Visited: Its Contribution to German Socioeconomic Performance over Time” by Arndt Sorge and Wolfgang Streeck
Join authors Arndt Sorge and Wolfgang Streeck, as well as discussants Lucio Baccaro, Tony Edwards, and Josh Whitford for a special roundtable on “Diversified Quality Production Re-Visited: Its Contribution to German Socioeconomic Performance over Time” in Amphitheater 2 of the Bâtiment Principal from 10:45am-12:15pm on Friday, June 30th.

Meet the Editors: Socio-Economic Review
A Discussion of Publication Strategies, Topics, and New Developments with the Editors
The editors of Socio-Economic Review will speak on getting published in the journal in Amphitheater 1 of the Bâtiment Principal from 10:45am-12:15pm on Saturday, July 1st.

SuAVE Visual Database Presentation
SASE now offers a new membership directory that allows members to browse membership data and find each other using a data visualization tool called SuAVE (Survey Analysis via Visual Exploration). The software uses zoom technology to move between the membership as a whole and individual members and offers geographic mapping to locate people. Members can control the information SuAVE can access through their password protected SASE profile page. SASE Treasurer Akos Rona-Tas will be giving a short demonstration of this innovation directly after the Presidential Address and before the Awards Ceremony in the JF Cier building's Amphitheater A on Thursday, June 29th.

Alumni Reception of the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies (by invitation only)
The Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies (MPIfG) cordially invites all MPIfG alumni to an Alumni Reception, to be held from 4pm to 5:30pm on Thursday 29 June in Salle 210 of the JF Cier Building (2nd floor). The Managing Director of the MPIfG, Jens Beckert, and the head of the Institute’s Society of Friends and Former Associates, Werner Eichhorst, look forward to welcoming you.
The reception is open to MPIfG alumni and researchers only.
General Information for Participants

Computers and Wi-Fi

Wi-Fi is available campus-wide via the “UCBL-Portail” network. Personalized login information is provided in your registration kit.

You can also access Wi-Fi via Eduroam or Eduspot with your login details from your home institution. Please contact your local IT support services within your home institution to check whether you are registered to access the Eduroam Wi-Fi network. More information about the Eduroam network can be found on the eduroam website: https://www.eduroam.org/

*Please note: You must bring either a USB key or your own laptop if you plan on using a PowerPoint presentation (Macintosh users should bring a standard VGA converter). USB keys are preferable.

Book Exhibit

This year’s book exhibit can be found in the lobby of the Médiathèque building, just behind the JF Cier building. Coffee and water will be on hand.

Refreshments

Coffee and water will be available at various locations of conference sites.

Copy Shop

You can find a copy shop nearby at Corep Lyon - Grange Blanche (152 Cours Albert Thomas). To get there, simply walk to the Grange Blanche traffic circle and follow the street Cours Albert Thomas.
SASE 2017 Early Career Workshop Award

SASE extends warm congratulations to the recipients of the 2nd Early Career Workshop. Winners participated in a one-day workshop hosted by senior SASE professors. The workshop provided an opportunity for longer and deeper discussion of applicants’ conference papers, enabling early career researcher networking, and offered sessions on getting published and career development, and an introduction to socio-economics. Workshop participants will be honored at the awards ceremony on Thursday evening, June 29th.

Globalization and Support for Unemployment Spending in Asia: Do Asian Citizens Want to Embed Liberalism?

Session Q-11

Abstract: Studies of welfare states of Western Europe and North America have long debated the “compensation thesis,” the idea that globalized competition increases economic insecurity and, in turn, increases citizen support for the welfare state. Few studies into this thesis, however, look at such dynamics in Asia, the continent harboring much of the world’s population and to have experienced some of the most extensive change and development in economic globalization. The present paper tries to remedy this important silence by analyzing public opinion in a large cross-section of Asian countries to identify whether and under what conditions exposure to globalization spurs economic insecurities, and in turn, generates support for social welfare spending. We focus on the possibility that globalization’s effects are moderated by two conditions widely seen to distinguish Asian experiences from those in Western polities: factor endowment characterizing diverse Asian economic structures; and existing social policy institutions characterizing diverse Asian political economies. First, we expect that in many industrializing Asian countries that are labor abundant, exposure to globalization is unlikely to threaten economic security of the mass of workers, and thus have little impact on individuals’ welfare state attitudes. Second and even in the most affluent part of Asia, the relative immaturity of welfare state institutions and the concomitant development of alternative modes of protection would considerably dampen the tendency of those rendered insecure by globalization to seek government protection. We test these expectations using five rounds of the Asiabarometer survey covering 28 Asian countries.

Our empirical analysis lends support to both expectations. First, we find evidence of the moderating role of aggregate and individual factor endowments. In the aggregate, exposure to globalization is more strongly associated with perceived economic insecurities and with support for welfare spending in the higher-income Asian countries that are relatively capital-abundant. Among those individuals working within the higher-income Asian countries, we also find evidence for the moderating effect of individual endowments: globalization exposure is more strongly associated with subjective insecurity and support for support for welfare spending among low educated respondents. Second, we also find evidence consistent with the moderating role of existing institutions for (social) protection: all else equal, the individuals who identify social welfare as an accessible means of protection are more likely to increase their support for welfare spending when exposed to globalization than are individuals whose primary means of protection is family support and/or private insurance. We take these patterns as important micro-level evidence for the conditional relevance and reach of the compensation thesis to Asian political economies.

2017 Socio-Economic Review Best Paper Prize
Klaus Armingeon, Kai Guthmann, and David Weisstanner
Thomas Franssen and Olav Velthuis

The SER Best Paper Prize committee (Marc Schneiberg [chair], Alya Guseva, and Isabelle Ferreras) considered all the reviewed papers for the four 2016 volumes, including symposia papers, but not state of the art, discussion or review forum papers. The committee looked for papers that: 1) addressed substantive questions and issues that have far reaching implications and are of interest to a broad range of SER readers; 2) clearly and effectively engaged prior theory and research; and 3) used state of the art research methods to analyze new or existing data sets in ways that either brought important new phenomena to light or substantially revised existing understanding of socio-economic facts, trends or relationships.

Klaus Armingeon, Kai Guthmann, and David Weisstanner's timely, methodologically sophisticated and carefully crafted paper, How the Euro Divides, addresses pressing issues and questions central to socio-economics: is the EU sustainable and how does the Union's and its recent economic policies shape democracy, unity and the politics of the EU? Analyzing 26 Eurobarometer surveys in 28 EU member states from 2002 through 2014, the paper finds little change during the crisis, on average, in the shares of citizens who display either "national sovereignist" stances that are satisfied with and trust democracy their home countries, but not the EU, or "escapist" stances that embrace democracy in the EU, but not at home. However, the shares of the "detached" who are dissatisfied with and distrustful of democracy at both contexts increased substantially, on average, at the expense of the "approving" who endorse democracy in both, with Spain, Greece, Cyprus, Portugal, Italy, Slovenia and Ireland leading the way. Using panel time series regression and counter-factual analyses, the paper finds further that the rise of detachment flows directly from the programs of austerity and internal devaluations imposed by the "Troika" on countries in the Eurozone's periphery. Leaving members without access to currency devaluation to manage balance of trade problems, the Euro has fostered austerity policies that support disenchantment with democracy and division, rather than unity, within the EU.

Thomas Franssen and Olav Velthuis' paper, Making Materiality Matter, puts to a rigorous empirical test one of the central questions in the sociology of markets: that of price formation. Using a dataset on prices and other determinants of over 80,000 fiction books published in the Netherlands between 1989 and 2009, the authors persuasively demonstrate that book prices are largely determined by their material qualities – size, binding and the number of page, despite the fact that paper and printing costs comprise a small fraction of the sales price, and the "quality" of books, judged by their sales, can vary greatly. Pricing as if materiality matters helps publishers adjust prices in agreement with the publishing house profit and loss statement. Besides, pricing based on quality, which is uncertain and highly subjective, would not be perceived as fair and legitimate by the readers, and would likely jeopardize establishing of a stable market order. The only way in which quality is factored into price setting is through different prices assigned to different literary genres. Theoretically sophisticated, meticulously researched, and written in a clear and accessible way, the article makes a major contribution to the literature on price formation (particularly in cultural industries), quality, value and valuation and moral economy.
About Socio-Economic Review

Socio-Economic Review (SER) is the official journal of SASE. It is part of a broader movement in the social sciences that returns to the economy's socio-political foundations. Devoted to advancing socio-economics, SER deals with the analytical, political and moral questions arising at the intersection of economy and society. Articles in SER explore how the economy is or should be governed by social relations, institutional rules, political decisions, and cultural values. SER considers the different ways in which the economy affects society, such as by breaking up old institutional forms and giving rise to new ones. The scope of the journal is deliberately broad, and thus opens the debate to new variations on its general theme. Its editorial structure allows editors to engage intellectually with authors and their submissions.

To find out more about SER, including detailed information on how to submit a paper, please consult the website: http://ser.oxfordjournals.org.

Editor in Chief Gregory Jackson and the other editors of SER will speak on getting published in the peer-review journal in Amphitheater 1 of the Bâtiment Principal from 10:45am-12:15pm on Saturday, July 1st.
SASE 2017 Elections

We are delighted to announce that Gary Herrigel will serve as president of SASE in 2017-2018.

The following people have been elected to a three-year term (2017-2020) on the Executive Council:

Lucio Baccaro, University of Geneva, Switzerland
Emily Barman, Boston University, USA
Nitsan Chorev, Brown University, USA
Virginia Doellgast, Cornell University, USA
Olivier Godechot, Sciences Po, Paris, France
Heather Haveman, University of California, Berkeley, USA
Monika Krause, London School of Economics, United Kingdom
Marc Schneiberg, Reed College, USA

SASE congratulates newcomers and re-elected members alike.

A big thank you to all those who participated in the election and to the Elections Committee: Neil Fligstein (chair), Emily Erikson, Jette Steen Knudsen, and Linsey McGoey for their hard work.

Warm thanks to Christine Musselin, Roberto Pedersini, Christine Trampusch, and Cornelia Woll, who will be leaving the Executive Council this year.

About SASE’s Home Base

The Center for the Sociology of Organizations (CSO) is SASE’s headquarters.

The CSO was founded in the early 1960’s by Michel Crozier, and pioneered the discipline of the sociology of organizations in France. Today it is part of Sciences Po and the CNRS. Erhard Friedberg directed it for many years, followed by SASE President-Elect Christine Musselin. Its current director is Olivier Borraz.

The CSO is a leading center of economic sociology in France, and its research covers the sociology of organizations, economic sociology, and public affairs. Scholars and PhD students participate in five major research programs at the CSO: Economic Governance, Higher Education, Risk, Health Politics, State and Territories.

With more than twenty senior full time researchers, thirty doctoral students and twenty affiliated research fellows, along with frequent guest scholars in residence (including a number of SASE members), the CSO is a lively international research community in the heart of Paris, and SASE is proud to be a part of it.

THE ECONOMIC SOCIOLOGY AND POLITICAL ECONOMY
GLOBAL ACADEMIC COMMUNITY

Dear SASE members and colleagues,

The SASE annual meeting in Lyon is the great occasion to present the Economic Sociology and Political Economy online academic community.

The Economic Sociology and Political Economy community's goal is to disseminate the insights of socio-political research of the economy to the public and academics; and to provide a virtual venue where more than 45,000 community members (researchers, students, practitioners, policy makers, and journalists from 120 countries) share relevant information, exchange ideas and create collaborations (generating about 120,000 monthly website views).

Reviews of enlightening books, interesting articles, thought-provoking reads from the leading blogs and magazines, sharp quotes, important calls for papers, scholarships and job openings are brought on a regular basis to the attention of our followers; and all these are related to topics in Economic Sociology, Political Economy, Social Studies of Finance and Markets, Labor and Welfare research, and Sociology of Economics.

The ES/PE community often serves as a teaching resource to arouse students’ interest in these issues. The ES/PE community also stands for public engagement of fellow scholars.

The ES/PE community is active through the mailing list and on social media. You are welcome to visit us, join, contribute a post, and spread the word to anyone who is interested in the socio-political study of the economy: your colleagues, students, and friends.
