A Word from SASE President Akos Rona-Tas

Welcome to SASE 2019 in New York City!

This is our organization’s 30th anniversary. It was in 1989 that SASE was launched by its founder and first president, Amitai Etzioni – an auspicious year, when the Berlin Wall expired and the World Wide Web was born. With the end of communism, the only alternative economic system to capitalism vanished, leaving, at least for a while, neoliberal capitalism as the only game in town, and sending scholars critical of the workings of the economy to parse small differences of capitalism’s varieties. Nineteen Eighty-Nine was exactly the right time to create a home for an interdisciplinary reassessment of all things economic. Since then, SASE has nurtured a style of scholarship that combines the creativity of trading ideas across disciplinary boundaries with rigorous empirical research. During its first two decades, SASE laid the foundation of its intellectual enterprise, started its very successful journal, and created a community of scholars. Our third decade has been one of robust growth. With the economic collapse of 2008 and the following Great Recession, interest in the scholarship SASE represents has been expanding, and our annual meeting this year promises to be the largest in our history.

We hold our conference at The New School for Social Research, which is itself celebrating a milestone year, as it turns a century old. Among The New School’s founders were Thorsten Veblen and Wesley Clair Mitchell, and during its first 50 years it hosted heterodox economists such as George Katona, Adolph Lowe, and Robert Heilbroner. With its interdisciplinary and critical tradition, and its world renown, there are few better places for SASE to celebrate its 30th birthday.

Yet our Annual Meeting is not about the past but the future. Our theme invites research on ways the future can be incorporated into our thinking about the economy. Full of uncertainties, the future is hard to fathom. How do social actors develop expectations about the future and what role do those play in their behavior? What can we know about the future? To what extent is our knowledge descriptive and performative when it aims at things yet to come? How does the nature of knowledge change with recent technological, political, and social transformations? These are some of the questions our conference will address along with many other themes.

SASE itself is moving forward. For the first time, our organization will award the Alice Amsden Book Prize. Named after the brilliant political economist, who also taught at The New School, the prize will be given every year. Another novelty is SuAVE, a service to help our members... connect with each other year-round. We would also like to build bridges between our scholarly pursuits and civil society. As a new initiative, SASE will host two roundtables called “Social Sciences for the Real World”, where academics, activists, and members of the public get to discuss topics such as populism and job automation.

I would like to thank the many people who have made this meeting possible. Our hosts, The New School and Dean Will Milberg, provided the venue for our conference. David Stark, Josh Whitford and the Sociology department at Columbia University helped with our gala site. I am grateful to Virág Molnár, Jackie O’Reilly, Jens Beckert, and Jenny Andersson, who as our program committee helped fashion the intellectual direction of the conference. I would like to acknowledge the labor of SASE members who agreed to serve on various committees, including Roberto Pedersini, who organized our Early Career Workshop, and the work of network organizers who selected the panelists from a record number of submissions. As President, I have also benefitted from advice by my predecessors, Gary Herrigel, Christine Musselin, Marion Fourcade, Bruce Carruthers, and Jonathan Zeitlin, as well as by our new treasurer, Nina Bandelj. Yet, the person who really keeps SASE’s 30-year-old wheels turning is the inimitable Martha Zuber, with her intellectual vision and curiosity, boundless energies and miraculous skills. She is aided by a wonderful staff: Pat Zraidi, Jacob Bromberg, and Shaun Owen. SASE is very lucky to have them.

We all hope that you will have a great conference, with valuable presentations, stimulating discussions and productive debates.
About This Program

First and foremost, SASE has gone fully digital this year! There will be no print programs available. Instead, you can find the conference program:

- At sase.org (as a PDF, with accompanying addendum updated regularly)
- At https://sase.confex.com/sase/2019/meetingapp.cgi (as a searchable online program)
- And as a mobile app on both the Apple App Store and Google Play (by searching SASE 2019).

The conference schedule has been loosely divided into two event types: plenaries and sessions. In an attempt to limit scheduling conflicts, sessions do not overlap with plenary talks.

Plenary featured speakers are all listed in the at-a-glance calendar at the beginning of this document.

There are ten time slots for sessions over the course of the conference, as indicated on the at-a-glance calendar. Since there are multiple sessions scheduled into each time slot, each session has been identified with a letter and a number. The letter corresponds to the network organizing the session and is paired with a number to create a unique identifier to help you locate the session in the program. Featured Panels are listed as FP, Mini-Conference Themes as TH, and Special Events as SP.

To find out where and when a given participant is presenting, you can use the search function in any version of the program. Alternatively, you can look at the participant list at the end of this program. Next to his or her name, you will find the panels in which he or she is presenting (e.g., Jane Doe, A-8). Once you have this information, you can look for the A-8 panel in the main schedule in order to find the session time and location.

The main schedule provides a detailed list of sessions (titles, locations, participants, etc.) in chronological order. To help you navigate it more quickly, a list of sessions organized by network appears just before it in this program.

Please note: You must bring your own laptop if you plan on using a PowerPoint presentation (Macintosh users should also bring a standard VGA convertor).
We all live our lives forward, facing uncertain futures, yet social scientists feel most comfortable explaining the social world through causes rooted in the past or through the constraints and resources lodged in the present. Such explanations omit an important step: both historic and structural forces are refracted through the set of expectations people have about futures they imagine. Those forces are activated by the anticipation of what lies ahead.

We live in a time of rapidly growing predictive technologies, and spectacular prediction failures. Powerful algorithms are predicting and guiding our actions from economic forecasts, stock trading models, consumer research, hiring decisions, welfare administration, risk management, electoral mobilization, and political choices to the most mundane tasks of everyday life, like borrowing money, choosing books and movies, typing messages, filtering spam, and driving cars. Artificial intelligence, machine learning, and big data are refashioning work, markets, governmentality, sociability, identity, and morality in unexpected ways and are redrawing the boundaries of what counts as valuable skills, knowledge, and culture. Their societal effects vary: they democratize access to information, but threaten privacy, help us with everyday chores, yet turn our personal data into a tradeable commodity. Improved efficiencies of prediction may bring great benefits in areas like healthcare and public safety, while trapping many in vicious cycles of accumulating disadvantages.

Just as predictive technologies proliferate, the world is becoming increasingly unpredictable. Our age is one of economic and political volatility that has presented ordinary people and experts alike with a series of great surprises, a heightened sense of uncertainty, and anxiety. With globalization both charging forward and in retreat, democracies in crisis, inequalities growing, institutions fraying, and large populations fleeing poverty and violence, exacerbated by our increasingly unstable natural environment, the future seems exceptionally inscrutable.

As no significant utopian political or economic alternatives are on offer, history appears to resemble a driverless car that is oblivious to our intended destination. The absence of a desirable and credible future in the public imagination makes inequality and injustice even harder to accept, fostering desperate resistance, resignation, or false nostalgia for golden pasts that never existed.

While this conference will feature papers all across topics of traditional concern for socio-economics, we especially welcome submissions addressing these changes in politics, the economy, and society at large. How can we understand the direction in which we are headed? What are the various ways to regulate these processes? How are these changes influencing inequalities, democracy, labor, communities, and the international balance of power? How should we think of time in social life? What role does imagination play in the economy? Will the mechanization of human cognition lead to a mindless social universe? How are identities being reconfigured? What has happened to human expectations, hopes, and predictions? How can we (re)gain control over our collective futures?

Established in 1989, SASE owes its remarkable success to the determination to provide a platform for creative research addressing important social problems. Throughout its three decades, SASE has encouraged and hosted rigorous work of any methodological or theoretical bent from around the world based on the principle that innovative research emerges from paying attention to wider context and connecting knowledge developed in different fields. This conference will also be an occasion to celebrate SASE’s 30th anniversary.

The vertiginous changes experienced by contemporary society have been accompanied by processes involving the restructuring and relocation of productive activities, both globally and locally. Technological change has led to greater flexibility of production systems and labor markets, which is expressed in a dynamic of capital accumulation that does not anchor itself to territories, but instead moves permanently through space and across borders in search of greater profitability. This phenomenon – typical of the flexible accumulation of capital – has generated new conditions for the concentration of productive activities in new centers of agglomeration, leaving in its wake a problem of unequal development, which reproduces the territorial asymmetries and the social exclusion of the populations who live in peripheral areas or who do not possess the necessary qualifications to enter the new labor markets.

Ibero-American countries face the challenge of designing and implementing public policies and development strategies that can adapt to the new conditions established by the knowledge society, with the purpose of promoting a productive transformation with equity and environmental sustainability, capable of reducing territorial asymmetries in access to basic goods and services as well as to the labor market. This task incorporates a vision of wellbeing where social inclusion (gender, ethnicity, race, immigrant work, etc.) is at the center of the development agenda.

Abstract and session submissions open 1 April 2019 - 31 July 2019

Organizing Committee: Rafael Arias Ramírez (UNA- Costa Rica), Mónica Arley Valverde (UNA- Costa Rica), Calos Armas (Universidad Nacional Mayor de San Marcos-Perú), Leonela Artavia Jiménez (UNA- Costa Rica), Shirley Benavides Vindas (UNA-Costa Rica), Catherine L. González Castillo (UTB – Colombia), Fernando Herrero Acosta (UNA- Costa Rica), Isabel Novo Corti, (UdC, Spain), Yenen Mejías San Lee (UNA- Costa Rica), Álvaro Parada Gómez (UNA- Costa Rica), Laura Pérez Ortiz (UAM-Spain), Santos M. Ruesga (UAM-Spain), and Julimar Da Silva Bichara (UAM-Spain)
New political, technological, and economic forces are changing the ways development is designed, practiced, and experienced today, in poor and rich countries alike. Three interrelated elements, in particular, deserve our analytical attention: a geopolitically and economically unsettled global order, smart information and communication technologies, and extreme inter- and intra-country inequities. By transforming practices of accumulation, surveillance, and redistribution, these factors shape the experience of development in significant ways.

An unsettled global order—triggered in part by a threatened US hegemony and China’s rising power—defines the diplomatic initiatives and economic investments in poor countries. Some foreign investments are driven by private capital, others are state-led. Some initiatives are for profit, others are designated as development aid. New ambitious projects include the UN-led Sustainable Development Goals and China’s Belt and Road Initiative. Other projects are driven and funded by local actors. On the ground, the effects on development are potentially dramatic—investments in basic health and education must have major redistributive effects; infrastructural projects are likely to transform social and economic practices in and across cities; the environment is necessarily affected—but we are yet to fully understand the origins and potential impact of such programs.

One competition informing global and local restlessness today is over technology. A smart global order is currently being created—an order in which information and communication technologies dominate public arenas and private lives. Much of the debates on new technologies have been concerned with the global North, yet in so many ways the impact on the global South may be even more significant. In the global South, new technologies are being effectively used to overcome extant infrastructural barriers to improve people’s lives. India famously uses biometric ID systems to distribute social benefits, for example, and other governments are currently collecting biometric data allegedly for similar purposes. New technologies are also used to monitor and control people. Governments exploit mass surveillance and smartphone technologies to compromise opposition figures; facial-recognition technology is used to scan for the presence of dissidents. The poor, refugees, and people trapped in the criminal justice system are particularly vulnerable. In the meantime, social media influence operations attempt to sway elections. In turn, technologies can be used by civil society actors to hold states more accountable. Local dynamics informing the development and use of technologies—and the impact of technologies on the future of work, the future of welfare, and the future of democracy—are essential to analyze.

Finally, the current global order is unapologetically unequal. Foreign interventions may strengthen current elites or empower rival fractions; mass automation is likely to bifurcate the global division of labor, but in unexpected ways; our submission to the gaze of corporations and governments make all of us vulnerable—but not equally so. And especially where social and political institutions are weak, the impact of current geopolitical dynamics and techno-political transformations is likely to both reproduce old dividing lines across classes, genders, and ethnic groups, and to add new divisions. Yet, we should also identify ways by which these geopolitical dynamics and techno-political transformations are used in the fight against injustices.

The SASE conference in Amsterdam, Netherlands, hosted by the University of Amsterdam on 18-20 July 2020, will feature papers on all issues of concern for socio-economics, but we especially welcome contributions that explore development today and how geopolitical interventions, technological forces, and inequalities shape and are in turn shaped by development, today as in the past, from a variety of disciplinary and methodological perspectives. SASE’s current members are uniquely positioned to tackle these new realities and offer valuable insights; we hope that this year’s theme would in addition bring first-time participants, novel approaches, and new inquiries to add to our conversations.

SASE 2020 Mini-Conference Themes
Call for Proposals

Development Today: Accumulation, Surveillance, Redistribution

Mini-Conference Theme Proposal Deadline: 30 September 2019

As they have in the past years, thematic mini-conferences will form a key element of next year’s annual conference in Amsterdam, hosted by The University of Amsterdam from 18-20 July 2020. Proposals are now welcome for mini-conference themes. Several mini-conference themes will be selected for inclusion in the Call for Papers by the program committee, which may also propose themes of its own. Preference will be given to proposals linked to the overarching conference theme, “Development Today: Accumulation, Surveillance, Redistribution,” but mini-conferences on other SASE-related themes will also be considered.

Proposals for mini-conference themes must be submitted electronically to the SASE Executive Director by 30 September 2019. All mini-conference proposals should include the name(s) and email addresses of the organizer(s), together with a brief description. As in previous years, each mini-conference will consist of 3 to 6 panels, which will be featured as a separate stream in the program. Each panel will have a discussant, meaning that selected participants must submit a completed paper in advance, by 18 May 2020. Submissions for panels will be open to all scholars on the basis of an extended abstract. If a paper proposal cannot be accommodated within a mini-conference, organizers will forward it to the most appropriate research network as a regular submission.

Consult the program for the SASE 2020 theme. Please see www.sase.org to see mini-conference themes from previous years.

Proposals should be submitted to: Martha Zuber (saseexecutive@sase.org)
Special Events

Meet SER: A Panel with SER Editors

The editors of Socio-Economic Review (Gregory Jackson [editor-in-chief], Bruno Amable, Nina Bandelj, Patrick Emmenegger, Julia Lynch, and Donald Tomaskovic-Devey) will speak on getting published in the journal in room D1107 of the Albert and Vera List Academic Center (Bldg D) from 2pm-3:30pm on Friday, June 28th.

Women and Gender Forum

SASE’s Women and Gender Forum (WAG) is pleased to announce its second Women and Gender Forum meeting. The event is aimed to improve senior representation of women in academia, to provide a networking space for female scholars within SASE, stimulate discussions about important issues, such as "challenges of publishing," "work-life balance," "leadership roles," or "career progression," as well as to facilitate networking. The event will provide an opportunity for female SASE colleagues to share their ideas, grow their professional network, and liaise with other women within their field or more generally in academia.

This event will begin with a peer-to-peer discussion session, organized as themed round-tables along various themes from 12:10pm-1:45pm on Thursday, June 27th in the adjoining rooms of the Starr Foundation Hall and Event Café (rooms UL102 and UL103) of the University Center building (63 5th Ave). As lunch will not be provided, we advise you to bring a sandwich lunch from one of the myriad restaurants and shops in the area, which you can get during the break between conference sessions and the beginning of the Women and Gender Forum (i.e., between 11:45am and 12:10pm), and eat during the networking session.

Program:

- 12:10pm-12:55pm Roundtable discussions
- 1pm-1:45pm Networking session

Participants will work in small groups and will have the opportunity to confidentially discuss issues, raise problems, explore areas of interest about their work and career in academia and receive advice, information about best practice, and recommendations from each other.

Afterwards, there will be an informal networking session and a discussion on gathering ideas for the following year's meeting. The event is open to female SASE participants and those who identify as women.
Social Sciences for the Real World

Imran Chowdhury, Isabelle Ferreras, Gerhard Schnyder, and Anna K. Skarpelis have organized two exceptional panels grouped under the heading “Social Sciences for the Real World,” to take place shortly after the main conference program ends. In the topical panels, they seek to help nurture the vital conversation between social scientists and members of the public in order to foster mutual understanding.

Each session will bring together a panel of academics and interested members of the public to engage in a constructive debate about these crucial issues, and about how social scientists and people in the “real world” perceive them. The sessions will use innovative dialogue techniques to provide an opportunity to discuss what we can jointly contribute to solve these problems.

The sessions will be held from 2pm-4:30pm on Saturday, 29 June 2019 in the Starr Foundation Hall (room UL102) of the University Center building (63 5th Ave).

Session 1: The Digitalization and Automatization of Work and Its Implications for Working People

2pm-3pm

Speakers: Giancarlo Crocetti (Boehringer Ingelheim), Gina Neff (University of Oxford), Mari Sako (University of Oxford), Pavlina Tcherneva (Bard College)

Chair: Imran Chowdhury (Pace University)

Session 2: The Rise of Populism and Authoritarianism and Its Impact on Freedom

3:30pm-4:30pm

Speakers: Sheri Berman (Barnard College), Koray Caliskan (The New School), Stephen Macedo (Princeton University), Sanjay Pinto (Workers Institute, Cornell / 1199SEIU Training and Employment Funds)

Chair: Anna Skarpelis (Harvard University)

Please note that space is limited.
General Information for Participants

Elevator Traffic

Of the four buildings in which sessions will be taking place, two (Buildings B and D) have rather small and slow elevators. We strongly suggest that you factor in the likelihood of elevator traffic when calculating your travel time between sessions in order to ensure prompt start times.

Buildings

Sessions this year will take place over four buildings:

- University Center (Building U), located at 63 5th Ave. (east side of 5th Ave., between E. 13th St. and E. 14th St.)
- Eugene Lang College of Liberal Arts (Building B), located at 65 W 11th St. (north side of E. 11th, between 5th Ave. and 6th Ave.)
- Albert and Vera List Academic Center (Building D), located at 6 E 16th St. (south side of E. 16th St., between 5th Ave. and Union Square West)
- Alvin Johnson/J.M. Kaplan Hall (Building A), located at 66 W 12th St. (south side of W. 12th St., between 5th Ave. and 6th Ave.)

Gala Reception at Columbia University

This year’s Gala Soirée is generously hosted by the Columbia University Department of Sociology on Saturday, June 28th. In order to get to the Gala, located in the Roone Arledge Auditorium of Alfred Lerner Hall (2920 Broadway, between W 114th St. and W 115th St.) from The New School, take the 1 train from the 14th St. Station on 7th Avenue uptown to the 116th St. station.
Computers and Wi-Fi

*Please note: You must bring your own laptop if you plan on using a PowerPoint presentation (Macintosh users should also bring a standard VGA convertor).

Wi-Fi is available throughout the New School Campus. Join the newschool-guest network and register for free as a guest, then click the link sent to your email within 10 minutes to confirm your account. If you have more than one device, you may use the same username and password included in your confirmation email.

Shops, Restaurants, and Cafés

New York City offers an abundance of shops, restaurants, and cafés at every price point. Visit https://www.newschool.edu/card/off-campus/ for a short list of locations nearby.

Photocopies

If you need to make photocopies, Village Copier (20 E 13th St.) is just around the corner from the University Center building.
NEW SCHOOL - GUEST WIFI

CONNECTING YOUR DEVICE

1. Go to your device’s wireless network selection settings.
2. Select “newschool-guest”.
3. You will be redirected to the New School Guest Wireless Network Registration page.
   • Enter your name and email address.
   • Click on the link to read the terms of use, and then check the box to accept them.
   • Select the “Register” button.
4. Check your email.
   a. You will receive a message to the email address you provided with your password. You have 10 minutes of temporary New School wireless Internet access so that you can check your email.
   b. Click on the link in the email you receive to confirm your account.
   c. On the web page that gets displayed, select the red “Confirm”. You now have access to “newschool-guest”, The New School’s guest wireless network.
   d. Once you’ve signed in on a device, that device will be able to use “newschool-guest” without your having to re-enter your username and password for the next seven days. If you require access for more than seven days, simply re-register for an additional seven days of access while on campus.
   e. If you have more than one device (e.g. a phone and a laptop), you may use the same username and password included in your confirmation email to register each device.
This year’s SASE CONFERENCE will again feature a special book exhibit organized and managed by LIBRARY OF SOCIAL SCIENCE. The exhibit will provide a comprehensive collection of the latest and most significant titles in the field and will contribute substantially to the excitement and intellectual value of our meeting. The book exhibit will be open throughout the conference. Please stop by early and often, say hello to book exhibit manager Mei Ha Chan—and browse to your heart’s content. All books are on sale at special, discounted rates.

The following are among the publishers whose titles will be featured in the display:

Inaugural Alice Amsden Best Book Award

The Specter of Global China: Politics, Labor, and Foreign Investment in Africa
by Ching Kwan Lee

The Alice Amsden Best Book Award committee (Mari Sako [chair], Wolfgang Streeck, Jonathan Zeitlin) considered submitted books with a 2017 or 2018 first edition publication date, and which are not edited volumes, with the aim of selecting an outstanding scholarly book that breaks new ground in the study of economic behavior and/or its policy implications with regard to societal, institutional, historical, philosophical, psychological, and ethical factors.

The committee is delighted to announce the recipient of the inaugural Alice Amsden Book Award of the Society for the Advancement of Socio-Economics: The Specter of Global China: Politics, Labor, and Foreign Investment in Africa, by Ching Kwan Lee (University of California, Los Angeles).

The committee writes: Ching Kwan Lee’s book is an impressive theoretical and empirical achievement in socio-economics. Rooted in six years of ethnographic study of copper mines and construction sites in Zambia, Lee presents a compelling case for “varieties of global capital”, distinguishing between Chinese state capital and global private capital in terms of business objectives, labor practices, management ethos, and political engagement with Zambia. The result is a nuanced understanding of Chinese investment in Africa, which goes beyond a simplistic image conveyed in the media. Lee’s account is highly readable, empathetic with real voices of people she encountered, and wonderfully reflexive throughout and in her appendix titled ‘an ethnographer’s odyssey’. With wide-ranging policy implications for economic development, this scholarly work represents the very best of comparative sociology and ethnography.

The Alice Amsden Book Award will be given annually for the best book that breaks new ground in the study of economic behavior and/or its policy implications with regard to societal, institutional, historical, philosophical, psychological, and ethical factors. The prize comes with an award of $2,000.
SASE 2019 Early Career Workshop Award

SASE extends warm congratulations to the recipients of the 4th Early Career Workshop. Winners participated in a one-day workshop hosted by senior SASE professors. The workshop provided an opportunity for longer and deeper discussion of applicants’ conference papers, enabling early career researcher networking, and offered sessions on getting published and career development, and an introduction to socio-economics. Workshop participants will be honored at the awards ceremony on Thursday evening, June 27th.

Legitimation of Income Inequality in Japan: A Comparison with South Korea and the United States
Session Q07: Inequality, Social Movements and Social Justice
(co-authors: Kikuko Nagayoshi, Tohoku University; Hirofumi Taki, Hosei University; Hiroshi Kanbayashi, Tohoku Gakuin University; Hirohsa Takenoshita, Keio University; Takashi Yoshida, Shizuoka University)

Abstract: Japan has witnessed the exacerbation of socioeconomic inequality over the last few decades, despite a long-held belief that Japan was a relatively equal society. Particularly, the income inequality according to gender and type of employment (e.g. standard or non-standard employment) is quite large compared to other counties.

Why are these inequalities so large in Japan? We attempt to answer this question through the lens of the legitimation of inequality, assuming the possibility that these inequalities remain unresolved because they are legitimized due to institutional and other conditions of Japanese society and because disadvantaged earners take inequality for granted. For the purpose, we will examine the following research questions through analyzing the data of the vignette survey which asks how much income should be paid to fictitious workers described by various personal and job-related attributes, such as gender and type of employment, conducted in Japan, South Korea, and the United States by our project team.

(1) How do the levels of just income for fictitious workers differ according to their personal and job-related attributes?
(2) Does the degree of difference in just income differ depending on respondents’ personal and job-related attributes? In other words, do disadvantaged earners oppose income inequality based on the personal and job-related attributes, or do they accept it?

The results of multilevel model analysis on just income show that Japanese respondents assume that income of workers should be different by several to a dozen percent according to worker’s gender and type of employment, as well as their family situation, occupation, age, and education even though other conditions are equal. Thus, these income differences are accepted as “fair inequality” by respondents. While this is also the case with South Korea, respondents think that workers’ income should be equal regardless of gender and type of employment in the United States.

Does the degree of acceptance of income inequality differ based on the attributes of respondents? We can expect that disadvantaged earners, such as females and non-standard workers, accept less income inequality replying that the difference in just income based on the personal or job-related attribute should be smaller than advantaged earners. However, this is not the case, but rather the opposite was found with female and non-standard workers in Japan based on the analysis of interaction terms between vignette’s and respondent’s attributes, although we do not find similar results in South Korea.

We conclude that income inequality based on gender and type of employment is so strongly legitimized in Japan that disadvantaged earners accept more income equality than advantaged earners. We will also examine whether the acceptance of income inequality can be explained by respondents’ assumptions toward personal and job-related attributes and preferences on distributive justice principles in this paper.

Many thanks to Sebastien Lechevalier (EHESS) [chair], Loraine Kennedy (EHESS), Shinsuke Nagaoka (Kyoto University), Thierry Pairault (CNRS/EHESS), Cornelia Storz (Goethe University in Frankfurt), and Hugh Whittaker (University of Oxford) for their work on the EHESS/Fondation France-Japon Best Paper Prize Selection Committee
The SER Best Paper Prize committee (Heather Haveman [chair], Isabelle Ferreras, Gary Herrigel) considered all the reviewed papers for the four 2018 issues, including symposia papers, but not state of the art, discussion or review forum papers. The committee looked for papers that: 1) addressed substantive questions and issues that have far reaching implications and are of interest to a broad range of SER readers; 2) clearly and effectively engaged prior theory and research; and 3) used state of the art research methods to analyze new or existing data sets in ways that either brought important new phenomena to light or substantially revised existing understanding of socio-economic facts, trends or relationships.

The committee is delighted to announce the winning paper for the 11th annual prize for the best submitted article published in the previous year: Jacob Apkarian’s "Opposition to Shareholder Value: Bond Rating Agencies and Conflicting Logics in Corporate Finance" (Socioeconomic Review 16(1):85–112).

The committee chair writes: This article addresses an important topic and provides an important correction to the myopia of research on corporate governance, which is almost always narrowly limited to investigating the shareholder value logic/orientation. Instead, Apkarian’s paper reveals why and when the goals of equity investors (shareholders) conflict with those of debt investors (bondholders); for example, the former push de-diversification while the latter promote diversification. This is important substantively because corporate financing is increasingly debt-based rather than equity-based. Moreover, the paper is an example of excellent integration of economic and sociological theory. Although debt-holders generally have less ability to influence management than equity holders do, large creditors, especially of short-term debt (e.g., asset-backed commercial paper), can coerce management by threatening to withhold funds. The likelihood of coercion may be greater among hedge funds than mutual funds and pension funds. But Apkarian argues that large bond-rating agencies like Moody’s and S&P are even more powerful, and so focuses on their reactions to corporate strategic decisions. The results of his statistical analysis are strong and will push scholars to extend his ideas.

Jacob Apkarian will be presenting a paper, “Shifting Logics of Legitimacy and an Emerging Paradox in the Corporate Bond Rating Industry,” in Network N (Finance and Society) session N-02: Market Devices, Ratings and Intermediaries.
SASE 2019 Elections

We are delighted to announce that Nitsan Chorev (Brown University) will serve as SASE President in 2019-2020.

The following people have been elected to a three-year term (2019-2022) on the Executive Council:

Bruno Amable, University of Geneva, Switzerland
Caroline Arnold, Brooklyn College, City University of New York, USA
Chiara Benassi, King’s College London, UK

Labour History, which has been appearing twice yearly since 1962, is the premier outlet for refereed, scholarly articles in the fields of social and labour history in Australasia. The journal publishes essays, reviews, and memoirs that reflect the involvement of labour historians in the making of history.

Historical Studies in Industrial Relations was established in 1996 by the Centre for Industrial Relations, Keele University. Content covers the employment relationship and economic, social and political factors surrounding it, such as labour markets, union and employer policies, law, and gender and ethnicity.

Since 1960 Labour History Review has explored the working lives and politics of ‘ordinary’ people. It has played a key role in redefining social and political history. The journal’s emphasis is on British labour history, though comparative and international studies are not neglected.

Theory & Struggle is the journal of the Marx Memorial Library. Currently published annually, the journal features articles that grapple with debates taking place within Marxist circles as well studying critical developments in the labour and progressive movements in Britain and internationally.

Originating in the Society for the Advancement of Socio-Economics (SASE), Socio-Economic Review (SER) is part of a broader movement in the social sciences for the rediscovery of the socio-political foundations of the economy. Devoted to the advancement of socio-economics, it deals with the analytical, political and moral questions arising at the intersection between economy and society.

Articles in SER explore how the economy is or should be governed by social relations, institutional rules, political decisions, and cultural values. They also consider how the economy in turn affects the society of which it is part, for example by breaking up old institutional forms and giving rise to new ones. The domain of the journal is deliberately broadly conceived, so new variations to its general theme may be discovered and editors can learn from the papers that readers submit.
