A Word from SASE President Sigrid Quack

As I am writing this, vaccinations in a number of countries are quickly moving forward and public life is resuming some ‘normality’ after periods of restrictions and lockdown measures implemented to contain the spread of the Covid-19 pandemic. At the same time, people in many countries, particularly in the Global South, are still suffering and dying from the disease and vaccination protection for all of humanity seems to be a distant goal. While the pandemic has exposed the fact that in a globally interdependent world, no one is safe until everyone is safe – to use a prominent phrase of the global health campaign – it also has unsheathed and amplified socio-economic inequality and gender, ethnic, and racial discrimination that often go hand in hand with differential access to economic resources, health care and medicines within countries and at a global scale. As a scholarly community, we commiserate with all those who are suffering from and struggling with the pandemic.

This year’s Annual Conference offers a unique opportunity for joint scholarly reflection on the socio-economic pathways that have led into, but also those that may lead out of, the pandemic. You will be able to attend a wide range of lectures and panels on various dimensions of the pandemic, dealing with topics like the economic downturn and recovery measures; continuity and transformation in the global health system; disruptions in global supply chains; the impact of the pandemic on migration and ethnic minorities; structural racism in the pandemic; the situation of essential workers; transformative innovation and new forms of work-life balance; challenges for democracy during the pandemic - just to mention a few. I hope that the conference will inspire lively debates in the SASE community on how we can make sense collectively of the pandemic as a historical moment and the preliminary trends we see emerging from it.

For SASE, this is the second online conference in a row. Building on the positive experience of the 2020 meeting, we have added additional elements, such as a novel socializing platform and an option for networks to organize speed networking sessions. For the first time, we offer the possibility to participate in the conference as an auditor for a reduced fee, and we hope that this will bring many younger colleagues and students for the first time to SASE who may return in subsequent years. During the annual meeting, we will celebrate virtually our award winners.

Financially, the last year has been challenging for the Society, but with the generous and multifold support of the SASE community we were able to address these challenges. Many thanks to all of you for your generous support: the donations by Past-Presidents and Honorary Members; choosing the upper band in the fee structure if possible; and mobilizing students to participate as auditors. In particular, we would like to acknowledge the support of the KHK/Centre for Global Cooperation Research; the Institute for Work, Skills and Training (IAQ); and the Deutsches Institut für Interdisziplinäre Sozialpolitikforschung (DIFIS) as this year’s virtual organizers. We are extremely grateful to all three institutes, and particularly to Ute Klammer, Matthias Schuler and Tobias Schäfer, for their generous support.

SASE’s annual conference builds on the work of many people. As President, I would like to thank the members of the Program Committee – Zophia Edwards, Paola Perez-Aleman, Len Seabrooke, Karen Shire, and Olav Velthuis – for their support in shaping the intellectual direction of the conference and putting together a line-up of exciting Featured Events. I would also like to acknowledge the often-invisible labor of SASE members who agreed to serve on our various committees, and the work of the network and mini-conference organizers who selected the panelists from a high number of submissions. My warm thanks also go to Nitsan Chorev, Jackie O’Reilly, Annelies Fryberger and Nina Bandelj who served on the Executive Committee during a challenging year and were always there to give advice if needed. Annelies Fryberger, our new Executive Director, who started her job last August, deserves congratulations for working herself so effectively into a set of complex tasks under extraordinary circumstances, greatly supported by SASE’s wonderful team of Pat Zraidi, Jacob Bromberg and Shaun Owen. The annual conference would be impossible without your important work – thank you!

I hope you will all have a great conference, with insightful presentations, stimulating debates and enriching virtual socializing.
SASE thanks the generous virtual organizers of this year’s annual conference:

The Käte Hamburger Kolleg (KHK) / Centre for Global Cooperation Research is one of currently eleven Inter-Faculty Research Centres at the University of Duisburg-Essen. It is rooted in the Faculty of Social Sciences and the Faculty of Humanities and closely linked to UDE’s flagship research area “Transformation of Contemporary Societies”.

As an interdisciplinary centre for global cooperation research, it is funded by the Federal Ministry of Education and Research (BMBF) for a total period of twelve years (2012–2024) within the funding initiative “Freiraum für die Geisteswissenschaften” (“Free Space for the Humanities”) which seeks to foster excellent research in the humanities and social sciences by combining optimal funding conditions with the aim to establish “reflection spaces” for the development of new research questions and experimentation with new ways of approaching them. At its core, the funding scheme considers international and interdisciplinary exchange between scholars as an important driver of excellence. Therefore, a core feature of the Käte Hamburger Kollegs is the international fellowship programme that allows the KHK to invite on average 10 to 12 international scholars to Duisburg every year.

At UDE, the aim of the KHK has been and continues to be the establishment of an international hub for interdisciplinary research on theories, methods and current issues of global cooperation and to facilitate collaborative research between the international fellows and scholars at UDE, at partner institutes like the Institute for Development and Peace (INEF), the Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities (KWI), and the German Development Institute (DIE/GDI) and at other research centres in the region.

Over the last years, the KHK has further strengthened its position as a nationally and internationally recognized centre for the interdisciplinary study of global and transboundary cooperation. It has done so by combining an internationally sought-after fellowship programme, as known from other institutes for advanced study, with a cutting-edge theme-oriented research programme. Every year, about ten international fellows have been invited to join the Centre where they have been offered the opportunity to collaborate with each other and the Centre’s research group leaders, directors and faculty members on a number of core themes. Through the combination of these different elements, the Centre has established a unique research environment that nurtures individual projects as well as newly emerging collaborations.

Theoretical, methodological and conceptual research at the KHK is divided into four thematic research streams. For the last three years (2018-2020), the focus has been on “Pathways and mechanisms of global cooperation” and on “Global cooperation and polycentric governance”.

Virtual Organizers
From 2021 to 2024, the main focus is on “Global cooperation and diverse conceptions of world order” and on “Legitimation and delegitimation in global cooperation”. In addition, empirical research is done on the four policy fields global governance of climate change and sustainability, the internet, migration and peacebuilding.

The Institute for Work, Skills and Training (IAQ) was founded in 2007 as a research institute in the Faculty of Social Sciences at the University of Duisburg-Essen. It conducts interdisciplinary and international comparative social science research in the fields of work and employment, social protection, education, and training.

The work of the IAQ is organised in four research departments:

- Employment – Integration – Mobility (AIM)
- Working Time and Work Organisation (AZAO)
- Learning and Education in Structural Change (BEST)
- Flexibility and Security (FLEX)

The distinctive feature of the Institute’s research profile is the combination of basic and applied research on the sustainable design and organisation of employment, wage, social protection, and education systems considered against the background of social and technological change. The IAQ is affiliated with multiple national and international researchers, research institutes and networks, and carries out projects with the support of national and international funding sources. The IAQ’s research provides support and advice for businesses, policymakers and civil society. It develops the evidence base for important decision-making; and evaluates various real-world projects.

German Institute for Interdisciplinary Social Policy Research (DIFIS)

Background
High-quality social policy research provides knowledge for the general public, politicians and public administration on the history, significance and future development of the welfare state. Furthermore, it identifies societal challenges and issues requiring political intervention as well as suggesting options for action. To achieve all this, social policy research needs to be firmly established in research and teaching with dedicated faculties and staff at universities and universities of applied sciences. The Support Network for Interdisciplinary Social Policy Research (FIS) of the German Federal Ministry for Labour and Social Affairs (BMAS) has been supporting broad, independent social policy research since 2017.

Objectives
DIFIS focuses and amplifies existing initiatives and programmes for promoting high-quality social policy research. The objective is to establish a research institute for social policy in Germany that will develop its own profile in research, networking and transfer. As a think tank it will anticipate future developments and it will act as a focal point, motor and service facility for social policy research and teaching as well as policy advice in Germany.

Organization
Since May 2021, the German Institute for Interdisciplinary Social Policy Research (DIFIS) is being run jointly as a scientific institute by the Institute for Work, Skills and Training (IAQ) at the University of Duisburg-Essen (UDE) and the Research Center on Inequality and Social Policy SOCIUM at the University of Bremen (UB). By anchoring DIFIS at these two nationally and internationally renowned institutes for social policy research, their expertise in research, teaching, transfer and policy advice can be easily tapped into. At the end of the initial project period (05/2021 – 4/2026), DIFIS is expected to be transformed into an independent Institute for Interdisciplinary Social Policy Research.

The organizational structure of the DIFIS consists of a supervisory board, an operative board, a general assembly and a scientific advisory council. This structure meets the challenge of being open to social, political and scientific developments while at the same time ensuring clarity of responsibilities as well as providing strategic and decision-making capacities.

Located in the heart of the Ruhr metropolis, the University of Duisburg-Essen (UDE) is one of the youngest and largest universities in Germany. The courses range from the humanities and social sciences over economics and business studies all the way to the engineering sciences and natural sciences (including medicine). The university is also well established in the international scientific community.

This is reflected by the top positions the UDE has recently achieved in international rankings. In a global comparison of the performance of the best universities founded since the turn of the millennium, the UDE came in sixth. In a comparison of the best universities founded after the turn of the millennium, the UDE ranks sixth worldwide. In the Times Higher Education (THE) Young University Ranking, the UDE is 16th among the top 400 international universities that are under 50 years old. The UDE is also well ahead when it comes to citations of scientific publications: It ranks sixth nationwide and 115th in the THE World University Ranking.

The research carried out at the UDE covers a broad spectrum including five cross-departmental main research areas: nanosciences, biomedical sciences, urban systems, transformation of contemporary societies and water research. More than 43,000 students from over 130 countries are enrolled at the UDE in a total of over 230 courses of study. An important objective of the UDE’s diversity management program is to offer equal opportunities to young people from non-academic backgrounds.

As an academic global player, the UDE cultivates partnerships with more than 100 universities all over the world. It is a member of the University Alliance Ruhr (UA Ruhr), a strategic coalition formed by the three universities in the Ruhr area. The UA Ruhr operates liaison offices in North America and Russia.

How to Participate

The SASE virtual conference will be powered by Zoom and navigable through our long-standing online conference portal, Confex: https://sase.confex.com/sase/2021/meetingapp.cgi/

You must create an account in the meeting system in order to access the virtual conference. To do so, visit https://sase.confex.com/sase/2021/meetingapp.cgi/ModuleMeetingInfo/FAQ.

Each session/panel is attributed a Zoom link, which you will be able to join by accessing the session information in the portal and clicking on a green “Join Live” button (which will only appear 10-20 minutes before the session begins).

Once you have logged in, you will find a toolbar on the left side of the screen (see image below). We suggest that you make use of the following options to facilitate navigation of the online program:

- If you are having any technical difficulties, submit your issue by clicking the “Technical Support” link and a representative from Confex will get in touch with you shortly thereafter.

- You may find it easier to navigate the schedule by clicking “My Time” in the light grey box within the toolbar.

- We highly recommend creating a personalized schedule by clicking the plus icon next to the sessions you are interested in.
This year’s SASE conference will provide socializing opportunities through a platform called SpatialChat. A “Social Room” link to the SASE SpatialChat site will be available throughout the conference in the toolbar on the left side of the Confex portal, allowing participants to meet up informally 24/7.

In addition, several theme tracks have organized punctual socializing events that may be found by viewing the Network or Mini-Conference schedule or by clicking the “Social Events” link in the toolbar on the left side of the Confex portal.

SpatialChat basics:

- In order to use SpatialChat, you should close other programs that use the camera and microphone. The site functions best with Google Chrome or Firefox browsers.
- When entering SpatialChat, you will be prompted to enter your name, a description of yourself, and a profile photo—you will only need to fill out the name field in order to access the space.
- When you enter any room, the view will be zoomed in on a small part of the whole room. Click on the zoom button on the bottom right or use a scroll wheel to zoom out and see a larger portion of the room.
- Each room is a part of a larger event space. When you click on the “show rooms” icon at the top right of the screen, you will find a list of rooms corresponding to theme tracks, publishers, and non-thematized rooms. If you click on the name of a room and there are less than 50 participants in it, you will be taken to that room.
- To move inside the room, just click on your circle and drag it to any other location. You can find your bubble by clicking on your name on the right panel.
- To search for other participants, click on the magnifying glass icon and type the name of the person you are looking for. Click on their name, and you will be moved to the same room as them.
- To leave the space, simply click the red “power” icon in the top right corner of the screen.

About This Program

The SASE conference program may be found at

- At sase.org (as a PDF)
- At https://sase.confex.com/sase/2021/meetingapp.cgi (as a searchable online program)

Please note that the online program is updated regularly with last-minute changes.

The conference schedule has been loosely divided into three event types: plenary, session, and social. In an attempt to limit scheduling conflicts, sessions do not overlap with plenary talks.

Plenary featured speakers are all listed in the at-a-glance calendar at the beginning of this document.

There are twenty-eight time slots for sessions over the course of the conference, as indicated on the at-a-glance calendar. Since there are multiple sessions scheduled into each time slot, each session has been identified with a letter and a number. The letter corresponds to the network organizing the session and is paired with a number to create a unique identifier to help you locate the session in the program. Featured Panels are listed as FP, Mini-Conference Themes as TH, and Special Events as SP.

To find out where and when a given participant is presenting, you can use the search function in any version of the program.

Alternatively, you can browse the online program’s “people index” or search the participant list at the end of this program. Next to the scholar’s name, you will find the panels in which they are presenting (e.g., Jane Doe, A-8). Once you have this information, you can look for the A-8 panel in the main schedule in order to find the session time and location.

The main schedule provides a detailed list of sessions (titles, locations, participants, etc.) in chronological order. To help you navigate it more quickly, a list of sessions organized by network appears just before it in this program.
The Covid-19 pandemic challenges all kinds of taken-for-granted assumptions, within and between contemporary capitalist societies. Not only is the Covid-19 pandemic predicted by the IMF to lead to the most severe global economic downturn since the Great Depression, likely to overshadow the recession following the financial crisis of 2008. The pandemic has also disrupted and overturned deep-seated practices in our everyday life worlds; it has shaken long-established ways of organizing in companies, industries and global supply chains; and it has provoked a questioning of established growth models and sparked a return of the state, at least in some parts of the world. One might even argue that the “less is more” logic of social distancing and stay-at-home policy, together with the high uncertainty about future development, is threatening ideational core beliefs of neoliberal capitalism, ranging from global free movement, free play of markets, and unlimited exploitation of nature, together with the imaginaries and expectations built on them.

At the same time, the pandemic has exposed the fact that contemporary societies are always as vulnerable as their most vulnerable groups. While the socio-economic impact of the pandemic varies from country to country, it has struck the weakest groups disproportionately and is likely to increase poverty and inequality within countries and at a global scale. Not only have people of color and slum dwellers been exposed to higher rates of infection and death; in many societies, workers in essential services such as care, retail, transport and others, belong to the weakest, often discriminated groups with low incomes and feeble or no social protection. But the pandemic has also made visible the mutual interdependence, obligations and need for recognition between members of societies, generating broad societal resonance for the protests of the most vulnerable against long-enshrined inequalities, discrimination and racism.

On these grounds, the Covid-19 pandemic represents a critical conjuncture of historical dimensions, which demands scholarly investigation of its causes, dynamics and consequences. While we have some knowledge of how the pandemic came about and who is immediately affected by it, we still know little about the broader pathways that may lead out of the crisis. Are we witnessing a series of events at the confluence of structural forces that limit future possibilities and shape future action? Or are we in the midst of a historical opening of possibilities for far-reaching transformation and change in which collective expressions of everyday life experiences and social mobilization within and across groups will foster creative organizational and technological breakthroughs, generate significant policy change or even push (varieties of) capitalism onto a different, and perhaps more sustainable pathway of socio-economic development? Comparing the current conjuncture with previous ones, such as the Spanish flu, the great depression or the global financial crisis, also raises questions about the depths of its effects. Will the organization of work and family life, patterns of production and consumption, regimes of discrimination and recognition, environmental footprints, and global division of labor just snap back once Covid-19 has been overcome? Or will the pandemic have set in motion processes of gradual but transformative change at the level of the economy, group and inter-group relations, forms of organization, institutional configurations, and national and global policy?
Because the pandemic has cut so broadly and drastically into everyday practices, its analysis calls for scholarly inquiry into the intersection and reciprocal influence of different levels of experience and action that have often been considered in isolation: individual and collective life worlds; social mobilization and inter-group relations; organizational and network dynamics; and the evolution of national, sectoral, and global institutions. For example, how have the redrawing of boundaries between work and family life, or the experience of suddenly being recognized as an “essential” occupation, shaped the way in which people collectively think about possible change, and if so, how does this translate into organizational, institutional and policy transformations? How has the pandemic refracted and amplified the resonance of longstanding protest movements, such as Black Lives Matter, and through which channels and with what consequences is this enhanced resonance feeding back into institutional and policy change?

The SASE conference to be held virtually on 2-5 July 2021, will feature as usual papers on all issues of concern for socio-economics. But we especially welcome contributions that explore the ways in which the pandemic challenges key features of contemporary capitalist societies; the variety of pathways of socio-economic development emerging from the crisis; and the multidimensional, cross-cutting patterns of transformation or restoration resulting from critical conjunctures, past and present. SASE’s current members are uniquely positioned to offer a broad range of disciplinary and methodological perspectives on these themes, but we hope to also attract new scholars to join our conversation.

Established in 1989, SASE owes its remarkable success to its determination to provide a platform for creative research addressing important social problems. Throughout its three decades, SASE has encouraged and hosted rigorous work of any methodological or theoretical bent from around the world, based on the principle that innovative research emerges from paying attention to wider context and connecting knowledge developed in different fields. SASE is committed to a diverse membership and lively intellectual debates and encourages panels that include or are likely to include a diverse group of participants.

At the beginning of the 21st century, the Covid-19 pandemic has marked the future of humanity, exacerbating social problems in Latin America and abroad, and making it increasingly difficult to achieve general well-being in a context of greater contamination that aggravates the situation. Current generations face a singular health challenge that has had widespread effects on the various activities and living conditions of the population—a new fact that has not only deepened old problems, but revealed new ones as well.

Although the origin of the problem is common—the SARS-Cov-2 virus—it touches different societies, nations, and regions of the planet, and will continue to be heterogeneous; likewise, its effects on economies, social relations, well-being, and rights in the short-, medium-, and long-term.

At the beginning of this century, the region of Latin America was continuing to insert itself into the international economy, largely through the export of commodities. The financial crisis of 2008-2009, and then the pandemic, interrupted and reduced growth rates in several countries, while others were able to reduce the impact thanks to the diversity of their resources. Countries such as Argentina found themselves below the average growth rate of 1.8% and others, such as Mexico, Chile, Colombia, and Peru, above.

From a social perspective, it has not been possible in recent decades to reduce the massive levels of poverty that affect a large part of the inhabitants of Latin America, nor to reduce the historical socio-economic inequality that has characterized it. And the reactions to the spread of the coronavirus have brought with them a weakening of social cohesion and greater expressions of discontent and vulnerability.

The high mortality, the huge demands on resources for public health, and the paralysis of the physical mobility of goods and people is taking a significant economic toll on all countries in the region. Relatedly, the closure of parts of industry and the reduction of international flights and transport, for example, have meant a decreased use of fossil fuels, which has contributed to reducing air pollution, leading to a degree of optimism regarding environmental sustainability. Such optimism, however, may well be temporary, since it is probable that pollution will begin where it left off upon reactivation.
From a political point of view, Latin America entered the 21st century after a period of expansion of democratic methods for the election of its governments, although in general this did not translate to more governance or the consolidation of states and laws. As such, democratic institutions in several Latin American countries appear to be undergoing processes of deconstruction.

In general, the prospects for economic reactivation both at the world level and in the Ibero-American continent as a whole depend, in the first instance, on the success of the dissemination of scientific advances to immunize the population. Following that, prospects depend on the implementation of economic and social policies that pursue more economically, socially and environmentally sustainable development for the region.

Being “well connected” has traditionally been associated with having influential friends or relatives in “high places”. Privileged levels of social and economic capital differentiate them from the “poorly connected” in diverse, economically poor, but potentially socially rich communities. In the digital age, the implicitly positive association of being “well connected” implies being “plugged in”, “on the scene”, informed and involved with “what’s happening”.

However, a growing critique of being “over connected” or “disconnected” from mainstream economic and political life is forcefully apparent in the recent Ken Loach films: I, Daniel Blake and Sorry We Missed You. We are increasingly becoming aware of public, policy and academic debates about the “right to disconnect” or movements to increase “connectivity” for dislocated communities. But a closer examination of the concept of “connectedness” is needed to understand how strong and weak connections unfold at different levels and across different societies for disparate communities.

In “The Strength of Weak Ties” Granovetter wrote, “the personal experience of individuals is closely bound up with larger-scale aspects of social structure, well beyond the purview or control of particular individuals. Linkage of micro and macro levels is thus no luxury but of central importance to the development of sociological theory. Such linkages generate paradoxes: weak ties, often denounced as generative of alienation are here seen as indispensable to individuals’ opportunities and to their integration into communities; strong ties, breeding local cohesion, lead to overall fragmentation. Paradoxes are a welcome antidote to theories which explain everything all too neatly.” (1973:1377-8).

The paradoxical experience of connectedness has been poignantly evident on political stages around the world. The heated, and deadly, debates surrounding Brexit, Black Lives Matters and the storming of the US Capitol in 2021 illustrate the very fractious climate where these connections are being vociferously, and sometimes violently, contested.

The overarching theme of the SASE 2022 conference will be to explore the paradox of Fractious Connections. This will be done through the lens of four key concepts that have received varying degrees of attention in comparative political economy: Anarchism, Activism, Coordination, and Control.

The concept of Coordination in comparative political economy has received considerable attention in relation to debates around the Varieties of Capitalism. But has digital disruption undermined this coordination?
The concept of Control has been used to understand the labor process; but how is this evolving in relation to digital surveillance at work and in politics?

The concepts of Anarchy and Activism have, relatively speaking, received much less attention within the SASE community.

Activism is frequently discussed within an Industrial Relations framework. While traditional male, manufacturing union membership has declined; a plethora of new forms of organizing for an emergent “gig” workforce has included the voices of younger, female, and ethnically diverse communities. We need to know more about these developments evolving outside established organizations.

Anarchy is not often discussed in comparative political economy, although there is a vibrant discourse in international relations (Hedley Bull 1977), and in the work of Chomsky (1994). Understanding how disruptive digital practices have emerged anarchically exposes new structures and organization of power, opportunity, and oppression.

Re-examining these concepts and developments relates back to the work of Granovetter in connecting the individual experiences with global societal structures to understand the paradoxical way fractious connections are evolving.

While these concepts will inform the overall theme of the 34th SASE annual conference, a wide range of contributions are encouraged to participate in one of the 18 vibrant networks, or submit proposals to host a mini-conference.

SASE provides a platform for creative empirical and theoretical research on key social problems. We are committed to supporting a diverse international membership encouraging lively intellectual and interdisciplinary debates. So whether you are new to SASE, or a seasoned aficionado, we look forward to seeing you in Amsterdam!

Special Events

Meet SER: A Panel with SER Editors
Editors of Socio-Economic Review (Gregory Jackson [chief editor], Bruno Amable, Nina Bandelj, Patrick Emmenegger, Ken Hou-Lin, and Jutta Becker-Ritterspach [managing editor]) will speak on getting published in the journal from 12pm-1:30pm EDT on Friday, July 2nd.

Women and Gender Forum
SASE’s Women and Gender Forum (WAG) is pleased to announce its fifth Women and Gender Forum meeting. This year’s event will seek to provide participants with the opportunity to meet new people and establish support networks through small-group discussions. We are going to cover a broad range of topics including the challenges of academic career during the global pandemic, work-life balance, and networking and visibility in the workplace while working from home. We are looking forward to meeting you there.

The event takes place at 4am-5:30am EDT (10am-11:30am CET) on Sunday, July 4th.

WAG is open to all female SASE participants and those who identify as women in a way that is significant to them.

Social Sciences for the Real World
Now in its third year, Social Sciences for the Real World—organized by Imran Chowdhury, Isabelle Ferreras, Gerhard Schnyder, and Anna K. Skarpelis—brings together topical panels that seek to help nurture the vital conversation between social scientists and members of the public in order to foster mutual understanding.

The 2021 edition of this event will bring together a panel of academics and interested members of the public to engage in a constructive debate about these crucial issues, and about how social scientists and people in the “real world” perceive them. The session will be held from 2pm-3:30pm EDT on Friday, July 2nd.

About Time! The Commodification of Time, Labor, and Well-being in the Modern Economy

Early Career Workshop Alumni are invited to join past and present ECW faculty for an informal alumni social hour on SpatialChat.
The event will be held in the Early Career Workshop Alumni room from 10am-11am EDT on Friday, July 2nd.

First-Timers Meet-up: Scavenger Hunt
If this is your first SASE conference, come join us for an informal, fun event! You will get to know your fellow participants and learn a bit more about SASE. And there are prizes to be won for the scavenger hunt! SASE Staff will also be available during this event if you have any practical questions or need help getting oriented in the schedule.
The event will begin in the First-Timers Room in SpatialChat at 10am EDT on Friday, July 2nd.

Welcome Session for all participants
This conference wide welcome session will begin with a brief welcome and orientation, followed by informal socializing. You can form a team to compete in the scavenger hunt, spend some time doing sociology mad-libs, or just take some time to chat with your fellow participants!
The event will begin in the Welcome Session Room in SpatialChat at 3pm EDT on Friday, July 2nd.
SASE staff will be available throughout the event to answer any questions.

Theme Track Social Events
A number of Networks and Mini-Conferences have planned special social hours throughout the conference schedule. Find them easily by clicking on “Social Events” in the Meeting App’s left-hand toolbar, click the "join" button to be taken to SpatialChat (make sure to allow it to access your camera and microphone), and find the corresponding theme track room listed on the right of the SpatialChat platform.

Conference-wide Social Hour
Form a team to compete in the scavenger hunt, spend some time doing sociology mad-libs, or just take some time to chat with your fellow participants! SASE Staff will be in the lobby to help you get oriented.
The conference-wide social hour will take place from 10am-11am EDT on Saturday, July 3rd.
Awards Ceremony

Join SASE President Sigrid Quack to celebrate this year’s winners of the Alice Amsden Award and the SER Best Paper Award, as well as the Early Career Workshop participants.

The ceremony will take place on SpatialChat from 3pm-4pm EDT on Sunday, July 4th at the Awards Ceremony stage. Following the ceremony, we will have an informal meet and greet with the award winners.

SASE staff will be in the lobby to guide you if needed.

Alice Amsden Best Book Award

Sorting Out the Mixed Economy:
The Rise and Fall of Welfare and Developmental States in the Americas
by Amy Offner

The Alice Amsden Best Book Award committee (Leslie McCall [chair], Matthew Amengual, Margarita Estevez-Abe, and Gernot Grabher) considered submitted books with a 2019 or 2020 first edition publication date, and which are not edited volumes, with the aim of selecting an outstanding scholarly book that breaks new ground in the study of economic behavior and/or its policy implications with regard to societal, institutional, historical, philosophical, psychological, and ethical factors.

The committee is delighted to announce that the 2021 Alice Amsden Book Award of the Society for the Advancement of Socio-Economics goes to historian Amy Offner for her book Sorting Out the Mixed Economy: The Rise and Fall of Welfare and Developmental States in the Americas (Princeton University Press, 2019)

The committee writes: Through case studies of Colombia and the United States, and through the lens of economic advisors traversing the two countries from the 1930s to the 1980s, this book blurs the boundaries between the global South and North, the developmental and welfare states, and the post-war and neoliberal eras. The "mixed economy" of the title refers to the continuities across these boundaries, as well as to the unintended consequences of policy activism rooted in one model of the state and economy that intersects and merges with a different model in the process of implementation and negotiation on the ground. Substantively, the book assembles evidence pertaining to a wide range of policy domains, from agrarian reform and poverty alleviation to housing development and higher education; it also moves spatially across rural and urban areas in both Colombia and the United States. The book is fluidly and elegantly written as it follows several key Colombian and American economic advisors and policymakers often working in concert with international organizations such as the World Bank and IMF. Although extensively researched and documented in the mode of historical analysis, the book engages with a large interdisciplinary literature on these topics—in economic sociology, political science, and economics—and thus will be of interest to a broad spectrum of SASE scholars.
Honorable Mention

Neoliberal Resilience: Lessons in Democracy and Development from Latin America and Eastern Europe

by Aldo Madariaga

The committee has also decided to award an Honorable Mention to political scientist Aldo Madariaga for his book Neoliberal Resilience: Lessons in Democracy and Development from Latin America and Eastern Europe (Princeton University Press, 2020).

The committee writes: This ambitious book examines the trajectory of neoliberal policies from inception to a later stage of development in which such policies become institutionalized and potentially resistant to opposition on the part of left movements, nationalized and other protected domestic industries, and the public at large. An analytical framework is proposed in which the resilience of neoliberalism is contingent on three dynamics: (1) blocking oppositional groups from political power, (2) creating and solidifying a coalition of supportive political partners, particularly from the financial and export-oriented business community, and (3) enacting constitutional reforms that insulate neoliberal policy and policymakers from democratic interventions and reforms. Using both quantitative and qualitative data and methods, the book offers an in-depth empirical examination of the impact of these factors on exchange rate and industrial policy in two contrasting country cases in Latin America (Chile and Argentina) and Easter Europe (Estonia and Poland), finding compelling support for the proposed framework. In the final chapter, the book considers the extent to which neoliberalism in Chile and Estonia remains resilient in the context of recent events, such as the rise of ethnonationalist populist movements, in comparison to the countries where neoliberalism is less institutionalized (i.e., Argentina and Poland). Taking up central questions facing countries in many regions of the world today, this impressive book will resonate with scholars throughout the SASE community.

The Alice Amsden Book Award is given annually for the best book that breaks new ground in the study of economic behavior and/or its policy implications with regard to societal, institutional, historical, philosophical, psychological, and ethical factors. The prize comes with an award of $2,000.
2021 Socio-Economic Review Best Article Prize

Stefano Pagliari, Lauren M. Phillips, and Kevin L. Young

The SER Best Paper Prize committee (Jeanne Lazarus [chair], Elizabeth Gorman, and Aldo Madariaga) considered all the reviewed papers for the 2020 issues of SER, including symposia papers, but not state of the art, discussion or review forum papers. The committee looked for papers that: 1) addressed substantive questions and issues that have far reaching implications and are of interest to a broad range of SER readers; 2) clearly and effectively engaged prior theory and research; 3) used state of the art research methods to analyze new or existing data sets in ways that either brought important new phenomena to light or substantially revised existing understanding of socio-economic facts, trends or relationships; and 4) were written with clarity, fluidity and readability.

The committee is delighted to announce the 13th annual prize for the best submitted article published in the previous year goes to:

The committee writes: The empirical part is based on the 2010 Cooperative Congressional Election Study, completed by a proprietary base called Catalist, in order to look at the support for two major bills that followed the 2008 financial crisis: The Relief Asset Program (TARP), which would help to bailout Wall Street banks and the package of financial regulatory reforms known as the Dodd-Frank Act. The authors test the US Citizens support to these reforms looking at demographic variables (including their race/ethnicity category) and most of all their key explanatory variable of interest is the ownership of financial assets. With impressive multi-analyses, the results confirm the author’s hypotheses that financial asset ownership increases the support for bailouts and decreases the support for financial regulation.

These results are refined with several other questions: they show the importance of the context, in period of financial booms, the identification with financial industry by households who own financial assets is higher than in period of crises. Also, class matters: the emergence of ‘financial culture’ is not even among social groups.

To conclude, this article provides strong results to an important and little explored question. There is no doubt it can be of interest for many readers of the Socio-Economic Review, since it triggers a discussion between political economy and the financialization of everyday life studies. In addition, we want to stress that the writing is exceptionally clear and easy to follow.
SASE 2021 Early Career Workshop Award

SASE extends warm congratulations to the recipients of the 6th Early Career Workshop. Winners participated in a one-day workshop hosted by senior SASE professors. The workshop provided an opportunity for longer and deeper discussion of applicants’ conference papers.

A myth-busting book challenges the idea that we’re paid according to objective criteria and places power and social conflict at the heart of economic analysis.

Available now in cloth
9780674916593 • £23.95

From one of the world’s leading economists and his coauthors, a cutting-edge analysis of what drives economic growth and a blueprint for prosperity under capitalism.

Available now in cloth
9780674971165 • £28.95

“A timely and very useful guide... Boushey assimilates a great deal of recent economic research and argues that it amounts to a paradigm shift.”
—The New Yorker

The epic successor to one of the most important books of the century: at once a retelling of global history, a scathing critique of contemporary politics, and a bold proposal for a new and fairer economic system.

Available now in cloth
9780674980822 • £31.95

A pioneering book that takes us beyond economic debate to show how inequality is returning us to a past dominated by empires, dynastic elites, and ethnic divisions.

Available now in cloth
9780674988071 • £28.95

“Globalists is intellectual history at its best.”

When a reluctant President Sukarno gave Lt Gen Soeharto full executive authority in March 1966, Indonesia was a deeply divided nation, fractured along ideological, class, religious and ethnic lines. Soeharto took a country in chaos, the largest in Southeast Asia, and transformed it into one of the “Asian miracle” economies—only to leave it back on the brink of ruin when he was forced from office thirty-two years later.

This volume offers multi-dimensional insights into the CPTPP and its impact on Southeast Asia. It begins with broad analyses covering the historical, economic and geopolitical aspects of the CPTPP. Subsequent chapters focus on the nature and implications of three key path-breaking provisions in the trade agreement, namely investor-state dispute settlement, intellectual property rights and state-owned enterprises.

This book argues the textiles represented on these sculptures offer a unique insight into the patterned splendour of the textiles in circulation during this period. This volume contributes to our knowledge of the textiles in circulation at that time by including the first comprehensive record of this body of sculpture, together with the textile patterns classified into a typology of styles within each chapter.

COVID-19 has wreaked social, political and economic havoc everywhere and has shown few signs of entirely abating. This volume focuses on the most part on the economic elements of COVID-19 in Indonesia. The volume considers both macro- and micro-economic effects across a variety of dimensions, and short- and long-term impacts as well. It constitutes the first comprehensive analysis of Indonesia’s initial response to the crisis from an economic perspective.
